Mounties Increase Guards On John D. After Threats

Could Not Ignore Probable "Hoax"

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — A telephoned threat to the life of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, received at the switchboard of CJLH-TV station shortly before the prime minister was to go "on camera" Friday afternoon, immediately invoked extra security action on the part of RCMP and city police but no incident materialized.

The first call received at the TV station from an anonymous caller said that if the prime minister appeared on TV "something pretty serious will happen to him."

Norman Botterill, manager of CJLH-TV, immediately called RCMP and city police. The prime minister's cavalcade of cars to the station was led by a city police escort and plainclothes officers followed in another car.

Plain clothes RCMP officers also were on hand at the TV station while the prime minister was being interviewed. During the time the interview program was on the air, another phone call was received at the station's switchboard, with the same voice saying words to the effect of:

"Get him off right now, or what we said would happen will happen."

Police officers also checked the prime minister's route both ways, as well as buildings and rooftops en route. Extra security officers were placed on duty at downtown points and at a hotel.

Precautions were maintained right up until the time the Diefenbaker aircraft took off for Vancouver.

"OBVIOUSLY A CRANK"

"These calls were obviously the work of a crank," commented Staff Sergeant W. A. Allen of the Lethbridge RCMP detachment.

"But we cannot afford to ignore them and all possible security measures were taken." Detective Inspector M. Coupland of the Lethbridge city police said "I don't think there was anything to it."

In Vancouver today, a member of Mr. Diefenbaker's staff said "as far as any of us are concerned, including Mr. Diefenbaker, we don't know the first thing about so-called threats."

BRIGGS 'BEST MAN' FOR JOB

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said here today H. Lee Briggs was named to the federal energy commission because he was "the best man."

The prime minister refused however to be drawn by reporters into the controversy surrounding the dismissed general manager of the B.C. Power Commission and the Shrum report.

300,000 Out to See PNE Parade

VANCOUVER (CP) — An estimated 300,000 people turned out under cloudy skies today to watch the biggest and best Pacific National Exhibition parade in history.

Some 2,000 performers, 60 floats and 35 bands paraded through downtown Vancouver before crowds that packed the streets.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who was to officially open the exhibition this afternoon, was near the head of the parade in an open white convertible which travelled behind a uniformed detachment of RCMP. He was followed by gaily decorated floats.

Surrey Man Killed

U.K. Soccer Openers Draw Large Crowds

LONDON (Reuters) — Wolverhampton Wanderers, trying for a third title in England's top soccer league, got off to a winning start today as warm weather brought thousands of fans out for the start of the 1959-60 season in this country's most popular sport. The Wolves defeated Birmingham City 1-0.

Big gates were reported by most clubs as the season, which runs until late next spring, opened across the country.

Wolverhampton is the team to beat in the First Division as it tries for its third straight title—a feat only two other clubs have accomplished in the history of English professional soccer.

More than 41,000 fans saw the Wolves score their lone goal in the first half. Inside right Bob Mason notched the tally.

CONTENDERS LOSE

The two teams expected to give Wolverhampton its biggest tussle, Arsenal and Manchester United, both lost.

Arsenal was beaten 1-0 by Sheffield Wednesday, a team that was promoted this year to the First Division from the Second Division. Arsenal played so badly that the 48,000 home fans resorted to derisive handclapping in the last half.

Inside-forward Dave Burn-side of West Bromwich Albion scored two goals and set up the third as his team beat Manchester United 3-2.

Nottingham Forest, winners of the Football Association Cup, was beaten 2-1 by Manchester City.

Reds Seize Outposts
In New Laos Fighting

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — Royal Laotian troops and Communist forces are locked in a bitter battle about 35 miles from the town of Samneua in northern Laos, according to reports reaching here today.

The reports said several government outposts had fallen into Communist hands during the past 48 hours.

There was no official confirmation by the Laotian government.

Nurses at a Filipino-operated brotherhood hospital at Banhan were said to have been moved out because of the increased Communist military activity.

$39,000 HOLDUP NO PRANK

STUEBENVILLE, Ohio (CP) — Two men held up the community savings bank at Yorkville today, getting away with nearly $39,000. It was the first day that special police, thinking they were victims of a prank, had dropped their guard.

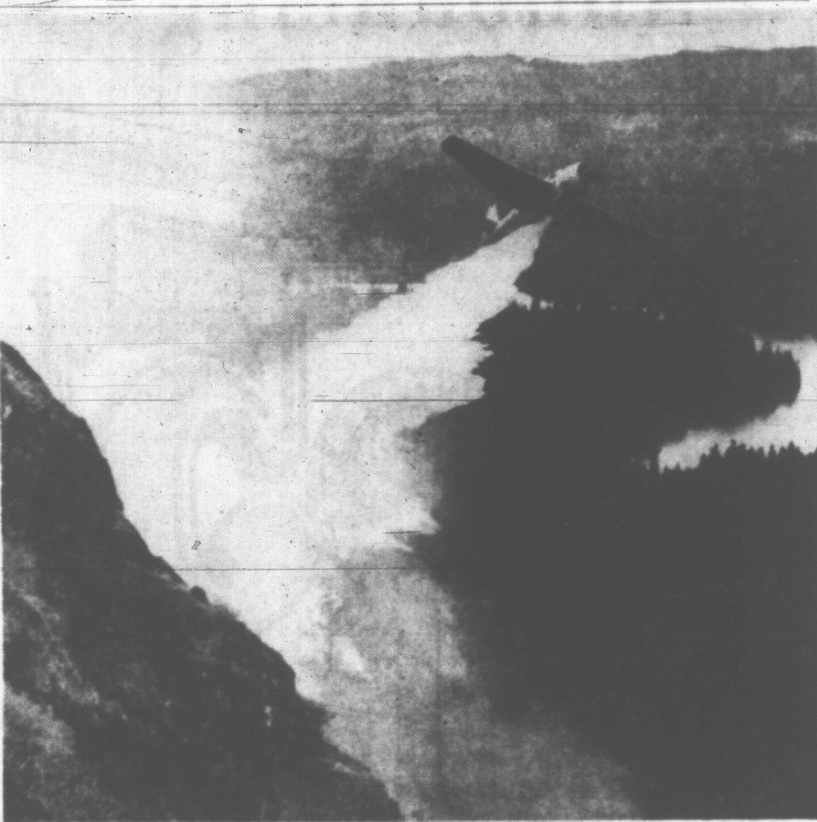

A week ago Tuesday a woman's voice on the telephone predicted there would be a holdup at 10.30 a.m. There wasn't any that day, but the special officers watched the bank day after day.

Concluding it was a practical joke, the bank dropped its special precautions today.

Johnston Five Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jovial John Johnston of Vancouver held a commanding and surprising five-hole lead over young Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., at the halfway mark in the 36-hole Canadian amateur golf championship match here today.

Johnston, a 33-year-old real estate salesman, continued his sensational sub-par shooting to finish the 18 holes three under par, firing an approximate medal score of 68. Cowan was two over par for the morning round.

FOREST FIRE 'BOMBED'

Grumman Avenger water bomber from mainland was called on by B.C. Forest Service Friday to control fire atop Mt. Baldy, overlooking Shawnigan Lake. Here 600 gallons drop on fire, reported today as "quiet" with small crew on guard. Blaze, started by youths, covered 15-20 acres.

FIREFIGHTERS with hand tools built fire guard over rough country which made use of bulldozers impossible. Fire started Wednesday, covered viewpoint favored by hikers in Shawnigan area.

IMMIGRATION BUREAUCRACY BLASTED

Is Canada Cold-Hearted?

VIENNA (AP) — Austria's anti-Communist press today rapped the West—and particularly the United States and Canada—for resorting to "methods of cold-blooded bureaucracy instead of humanity" in denying political asylum to four stowaway-refugees from Communist Yugoslavia.

The refugees spent five months aboard a Danish ship and three times crossed the Atlantic in search for a Western country that would accept them. Their odyssey ended at New York's Austrian consulate Friday night when they were given Austrian immigration papers and boarded a plane for Vienna.

Austria's biggest daily, Neuer Kurier, inquires in a sarcastic front-page editorial by editor Hugo Portisch:

"How would the United States and Canada act in Austria's place—with borders of three Communist neighbor countries which for many years were crossed by hundreds of thousands of refugees escaping tyranny because they believed in the ideals of freedom?"

"Would the United States and Canada also ask these refugees for a passport, a visa, a paid return ticket, an X-ray photograph? And if the refugees didn't have these things, would they be taken to the border and sent back?"

"We understand many things. We realize that a country has its laws, that authorities comply with the laws. But we fail to grasp the reason why nations with so much space for millions of people could not apply humanity instead of law in the case of four people... who—to the letter of the law—have ceased to be human beings because they have no papers, no visa, no money..."

ROCKEFELLER WEDS FORMER MAID

'Love Breaks All Barriers' —Cinderella Becomes Bride

SOGNE, Norway (AP) — in a country church on a gentle knoll, within sight of the bride's family home, Ann Marie Rasmussen married Steven Rockefeller today and became a member of the millionaire family for whom she once worked as a parlor maid.

The service lasted 45 minutes. During most of that time Steven hardly took his eyes off his bride.

When she entered on the arm of her father, Steven rose and watched while she walked slowly down the centre aisle.

Anne Marie, beautiful in a white wedding gown with a pearl-studded veil, kept her eyes downcast. But when she was about 10 feet from the altar rail, she raised her head, glanced at Steven and smiled. She looked pale.

They pronounced their vows in a country church on a gentle knoll, within sight of the bride's family home.

Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, and Steven's brothers, sisters, and a sister-in-law witnessed the Lutheran ceremony.

Mrs. Rockefeller and Anne Marie's father, Kristian Rasmussen, retired grocer and fish merchant, sat together near the altar.

FLOWERS IN AISLE

The bride's mother, Lovise, watched the rites from the opposite side of the centre aisle, which was decorated with pink carnations and roses.

Rev. Olav Gaustestad, vicar of Sogne Parish Church, asked the young couple, in turn, whether they would take each other as man and wife. Then he said: "Now give each other your hand on that."

Steven took Anne Marie's hand in his and the vicar placed his hands over theirs and solemnly pronounced the traditional phrase:

"You have promised each other that you will live in matrimony, and have confessed it before God and man and given your hand on it, and I now proclaim that you are man and wife. In the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Pastor Gaustestad told the couple:

"Your example shows that real love, which is from God, breaks down all the social and conventional barriers amongst us. To build a good home is perhaps the greatest of all arts."

Steven and Anne Marie fly to New York Sunday for a honeymoon in the United States.

Crowds lined the road in front of the church three hours before the ceremony.

Church Group
A-Test Ban

RHODES, Greece (Reuters) — The "foreign ministry" of the World Council of Churches today appealed to the United States, Britain and Russia not to resume nuclear tests, so as to give the Geneva test ban conference more time to reach agreement.

The "ministry"—the committee of churches on international affairs—called urgently for a treaty to end all tests. It called on all other powers contemplating tests to suspend them.

The "ministry" also called for urgent negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the Algerian war.

The council embraces 173 Protestant and Greek Orthodox churches.

HOLLYWOOD—Somewhere, somehow, somebody must have a home for a model of Jimmy Durante's nose.

But apparently not at the Smithsonian Institution.

The folks at the museum are turning up their cultured noses at a proposal to add the duplicate schnoz to the Smithsonian's historical treasures.

A museum spokesman said there just doesn't seem to be any particular place in the Smithsonian for the pear-sized protuberance—even if it were mounted on a fancy bronze plaque.

VANCOUVER—Police served the first summons under a bylaw prohibiting littering the streets which became effective last Saturday.

It was served on a man who hurled a traffic ticket on the street in disgust shortly after receiving it from a constable.

LONDON—Gypsy Rose Lee said today she got mistaken for Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia.

The rather unlikely error, she said, occurred when her Rolls-Royce collided with a motorcycle on a mountain road above the Adriatic Sea.

She said that when she got out the motorcyclist and his rider fled on foot, leaving the bike in the road.

Miss Lee said she drove on 30 miles to the Yugoslav resort town of Pula, Tito's favorite holiday retreat, and learned why the two ran.

"It is well known that there are only two Rolls-Royces in the whole of Yugoslavia and both belong to Marshal Tito," she said an official told her.

Miss Lee said she came to London to buy a new Rolls-Royce at $19,600.

BUDAPEST—American singer Paul Robeson said in an interview published here today that he will ignore United States passport restrictions and visit Communist China and Hungary to give concerts.

Robeson, who passed through Budapest earlier this week on his way to the neighboring Communist republic of Romania, told the Hungarian Communist paper Nepszabadsag: "For 10 years I have been a prisoner in my own country. I was not allowed to go abroad and I was prevented from meeting the European soldiers of the World Peace Movement."

Robeson said he intends to spend six months every year in the Communist countries—not longer, he explained, because he wants to maintain contact with "peace workers in the capitalist countries."

'THE GREAT ELOPEMENT'... AND SIR THOMAS DID

SIR THOMAS BEECHAM... to be tamed?

LONDON (AP)—Sir Thomas Beecham, the petulant patriarch of the podium, wound up a satisfactory recording of Handel's The Great Elopement. Then the 80-year-old British maestro and his 27-year-old secretary, Shirley Hudson, left the study together—and eloped.

Their elopement was kept secret until this morning when Sir Thomas himself—presumably honeymooning in Switzerland—advised it in a London newspaper.

A six-line notice in The Daily Telegraph's personal classified section said:

"Sir Thomas Beecham and Miss S. Hudson."

NOT GOVERNMENT'S FAULT, SAYS DIF

Loan Freeze Blamed on Banks

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker Friday night criticized the attitude of Canada's chartered banks towards increases in Bank of Canada interest rates.

Mr. Diefenbaker, addressing about 500 persons attending the 70th anniversary banquet of the Lethbridge Chamber of Commerce, said an "erroneous impression has been created suggesting that restrictions on lending were attributed to increases in the Bank of Canada interest rates."

The claim, made by chartered banks, was "scarcely in accordance with the facts," the prime minister said.

Chartered banks could borrow only on occasion from the Bank of Canada, and then only for a few months.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the reason for restrictions was solely "the tremendous upsurge in the Canadian economy with the result that commercial loans have reached an all-time record."

"There has been no freezing of the money supply by the government; no policy to restrain lending."

He said the only restrictions now being imposed are those made by the lending organizations themselves.

The prime minister said he looked to banks to administer lending policies so small borrowers and businessmen would not be placed in an "impossible position."

Defence Minister Pearekes of Canada arrived here Friday for a two-day visit during which he will confer with United States military officials. Mr. Pearekes was greeted with full military honors.

Mr. K. to Face Press In TV Appearance

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The North American public will get at least one good television view of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in action during his 12-day tour of the United States.

It was learned Friday night that Khrushchev will make a major address and engage in a no-holds-barred question and answer session with reporters at the National Press Club here Sept. 16.

The entire affair will be carried on television and radio by the major networks, which have offered up to two hours air time for the proceedings.

OTTAWA (UPI)—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said Friday Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev was invited to visit Ottawa during his U.S. tour but was unable to accept.

The brief announcement, issued almost 24 hours after the prime minister had left on a visit to Western Canada, said the Canadian ambassador in Moscow, D. M. Johnson, had been instructed by mail some days ago to ascertain whether it would be possible for the Soviet leader to include Ottawa in his North American itinerary.

"The Soviet government now has replied expressing warm gratitude to the Canadian government for its interest in having Mr. Khrushchev visit Canada, but regretting that previous commitments will not enable him to accept," the statement said.

Charges, Denials on B.C. Highway Fill the Air

HON. P. A. GAGLIARDI
... accused

Charges by Opposition leader Robert Strachan of political patronage in the B.C. highways department ran into a flat denial today from Highway Minister Philip Gagliardi.

Mr. Gagliardi said in Kamloops his department is "an open book to anyone who is authorized to look into it" and is "being investigated all the time" by the provincial comptroller-general.

He challenged Mr. Strachan to "name one company that has received a government contract through political patronage."

Mr. Strachan issued a statement Friday afternoon making the accusations against Mr. Gagliardi.

Said Mr. Strachan: "He is utilizing his $20,000, 000 per year day work allowance for political patronage to reward his friends.

"Many of the road contracts are given to companies that are sympathetic to, or have directors connected with Mr. Gagliardi, Social Credit or Mr. Gagliardi's church" (in Kamloops).

Mr. Strachan said: "In view of the recent disclosures by a Vancouver newspaper of an RCMP investigation into certain highways department contracts and suggestions of possible patronage in the granting of contracts, I am presenting certain facts which should be known by every member of the public."

"Research through public documents has brought to light certain facts which, I submit, at the very least warrant a full independent investigation into the whole operation of the highways department."

Mr. Strachan recalled that on Aug. 8 last a Vancouver newspaper published an article regarding highway department expenditures entitled "The Province Checks Rumors."

It alleged that there had been an RCMP investigation into one particular project.

The article also alleged that a regional mechanical superintendent for the highways department had resigned from his position and that he was a director of one of the companies involved.

His wife was identified as immediate past president of the women's auxiliary to the Social Credit League.

Mr. Strachan also alleged that a director of the company was an elder in Mr. Gagliardi's church at Kamloops, while the director of another was a defeated Social Credit candidate in the Kaslo-Slocan riding.

The director of a third company was also a defeated Social Credit candidate in Kamloops and was now administrator of the government extension of the Woodlands School at Tranquille Sanatorium.

Mr. Strachan claimed that the appointment was made in recent months.

He appended a long list of companies and their directorships.

Premier Bennett declined to hear Mr. Strachan's allegations at his press conference Friday, and Highways Minister Gagliardi could not be reached for comment.

'LET PUBLIC DECIDE'

Bennett Asks Papers Print Shrum Report

Premier Bennett has challenged the "metropolitan press" of British Columbia to print the Shrum Royal Commission report in full and "let the public decide the case for itself."

If they do not do so within 10 days, he said Friday, he will recommend that the B.C. Government News (printed by the Queen's Printer) publish the 200-page report verbatim "at the earliest possible moment."

Then, he added, "every interested British Columbian will be able to read it for himself and, most important, judge it for himself."

The premier read this statement at a press conference in reply to leaders of B.C.'s opposition who have attacked him for what CCF leader Robert Strachan called "a loathsome, cheap, slimy political use of high office" in commenting on the Shrum report before it was released.

All three leaders condemned his interpretation of the report.

VOLCANIC ASH ON SEA COINCIDED WITH 'QUAKE'

FLORENCE, Ore. (AP) — Coastal residents said Friday high waves and what appeared to be volcanic ash on the ocean led them to suspect volcanic action at sea coincided with the Montana earthquake.

Waves up to 20 feet high came rolling in Monday and Tuesday, they said. The foam was grey and the waves left beach deposits of what appeared to be ash, they said.

ENERGY BOARD POST

Premier Insists Shrum Accepted

Premier Bennett insisted Friday that Dr. Gordon Shrum, now in Copenhagen, had accepted the appointment of chairman of British Columbia's new energy board.

"We asked him if he would serve and he said 'Yes'—that was quite recently."

The premier was referring to a telephone interview with Copenhagen in which Dr. Shrum was quoted as saying he did not know whether he would accept the appointment, and that he was "taken by surprise" when he heard of it.

Alaska and B.C. 'Get Together' At Kitimat Meet

KITIMAT, B.C. (CP) — Top Canadian and Alaskan officials will meet next week in this "aluminum city" carved out of what was once a wilderness.

It is a meeting that may have more than a little significance both for the new American state and for British Columbia.

The two top figures will be Prime Minister Diefenbaker and William A. Egan, first elected governor of the 49th state. Both will address the delegates to the two-day meeting of the associated boards of trade of central B.C. and Alaskan affiliates.

Now that Alaska has gained statehood she is looking for ways to bolster her economy.

TURK KILLED BY RED GUNS

ANKARA (AP) — Russian border guards opened machine-gun fire on a group of Turks near the Soviet frontier Thursday afternoon, killing one and seriously injuring one or two others, Turkish press reports said today.

The Russians, the reports said, told Turkish officials the group had crossed into Russian territory and their guards fired in order to force them back.

No Bad Feeling Was Intended

The premier declined to amplify his dual reference to "one newspaper" and then to "the metropolitan press."

"I have nothing to add to the statement," he said, "except to say that it has been made without any ill-feeling."

Earlier in the statement he said:

"The reaction of opposition political leaders and some metropolitan newspapers, who are their apologists, to the findings released this week of the royal commission into B.C. Power Commission matters was both predictable and typical."

"Each resorted to one of the oldest political dodges in the books—the one that says 'you're caught off base, cry foul!'"

"It is now almost a year since charges of improper conduct by the government towards the Power Commission were first levelled by the former general manager of the Power Commission (H. Lee Briggs).

"Since the very first day those charges were made, both the opposition leaders and some sections of the press have been pronouncing the government guilty of those charges."

"The government could have retaliated in kind from the very first day, too. But instead, to leave no room for doubt in the public mind that these charges would be investigated fully, impartially and under oath, it appointed a royal commission to hear the case and report its findings."

"The men appointed to the commission are men of the highest integrity and reputation. In exhaustive hearings, they probed every aspect of the charges levelled by the former general manager (Mr. Briggs) and last Thursday (Aug. 13) their findings were received."

War Veteran, Lodge Man Laid to Rest

DUNCAN — Funeral services were held today at Hirst Funeral Chapel for Frederick Richard Walker, 84, who died at King's Daughters' Hospital Thursday.

Rev. B. Page officiated, with interment at St. Mary's Cemetery.

Born in Sibley, Leicester-shire, England, he had been a resident of Duncan for the past 19 years, moving here from Alberta. A veteran of the First World War, he served overseas with the Army Service Corps. He was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose, Duncan, and the Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his widow, Florence, three sons, Ralph and Stanley of Calahoo, Alberta, and Charles, in Bowser; three daughters, Mrs. S. H. Watson, Victoria, Mrs. C. K. Armstrong, Onoway, Alta., and Mrs. G. Paterson, Toronto; 20 grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and several brothers and sisters in England.

John Watt, president of the Kitimat Chamber of Commerce, says the new town is out to "put on a show." Besides the serious business sessions, there will be tours of the multi-million-dollar plant, a potlatch, coffee-sherry parties and early morning fishing for salmon in Kitimat River.

MADRID, Spain (Reuters) — Luis Miguel Dominguez, 32-year-old playboy-bullfighter acclaimed by many as the world's leading matador, was seriously gored in the stomach Friday at Bilbao. Dominguez recently returned to the bullring after recovering from a serious goring July 30.

Impotent Clauses Bear Repeating

"On Monday night (Aug. 17) at Courtenay I issued a statement concerning these findings, which were a vindication of the government position."

"It should not be necessary for me to deal with them in detail again, but the two important ones, concerning charges of improper political interference with the Power Commission, bear repeating."

"The first one states that it was fortunate indeed that the government refused to allow the Power Commission to impose a 12 per cent rate increase and thereby saved its customers hundreds of thousands of dollars in unjustified charges."

"The second one states that there has never been a single instance where political pressure has been exerted on the Power Commission by the Social Credit government."

"And it adds that, while there may have been one occasion when political pressure was in fact exerted, that occasion was in 1951 when the coalition of Liberals and Conservatives was the government of British Columbia."

The day following this statement the premier said he turned over to the press the five available copies of the full commission report.

Killing a Customer

CANADA HAS RECENTLY signed an atomic energy agreement with Japan. This will free Japan from the restriction which otherwise limits exports of Canadian uranium to 2,500 pounds.

Other activities in this field include the recent sale of six tons of uranium oxide to Japan—a relatively small shipment amounting to only $96,000—arrangements for a similar shipment later this year, and the earlier sale of three tons of uranium metal through the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Japan at present is commencing what has been described by one Canadian authority as a "very vigorous" program of atomic power development. It may be five years or more before the experimental period is finished and large-scale production begins, but by that time Japan's need for additional power may be pressing. At the present time, according to the Japanese ambassador to Ottawa, the country's hydro resources have been developed to the economic limit, and oil and coal plants already are in operation. The next step must be atomic energy.

Obviously, a large market for uranium is in prospect there. Equally obviously Canada could become the supplier of that market.

In the recent sales, this country underbid the United States and South Africa, in what is today a very competitive business. The Canadian uranium industry is in none too healthy condition at the moment. The possibility of a future Japanese market is therefore an attractive one. Canada might well be able to compete successfully for this new trade, insofar as price, product and delivery are concerned.

But here is the rub. Japan today buys much more from Canada than we do from the Asian country. Canada fosters this imbalance by discouraging the importation of Japanese products. Only recently, for instance, the Ottawa Government coerced Japan into a "voluntary" restriction of textile exports to this country. Under such conditions, Japan cannot easily increase its purchases from Canada. In fact, the opposite trend is already under way.

How will this affect the possibilities of uranium sales to Japan? Japan will be loath to increase its disadvantageous balance of trade with Canada. Denied larger exports, the likelihood is that it will add uranium to its list of purchases from Canada only by cutting off some other import such as grain; or it will buy its uranium from one of the other countries, which are only too eager to sell.

In either case, the Conservative Government's dampener on imports from Japan will be at the expense of Canadians who would like to export to that country. That must include quite a lot of Canadians.

Court and School Discipline

PROFESSIONALS AND LAY people interested in British Columbia's education system have followed with interest a recent court case in Castlegar.

There a school principal was charged with assault for strapping a boy on his partially bared buttocks. The magistrate, acquitting the accused found "no evidence... to show that defendant Brown (School Principal William Roy Brown) acted otherwise than as a kind, firm and judicious teacher."

The ruling is important because it gives force and interpretation to the section of the School Act governing corporal punishment. That section says, in effect, that a teacher shall administer discipline as a "kind, firm and judicious parent in his family," avoiding corporal punishment except where it is necessary.

No teacher worth his salt resorts to the strap as the sole means of handling difficult children. There is, however, a time and a place for it, and the Castlegar magistrate apparently believes that the case brought before him was one in which the time and place were right.

The importance of the decision rests on the conviction which has grown up in many parts of the province that a teacher could not strap a child without running into the danger of being brought to court to answer an assault charge.

Legal action can be taken by parents who believe their children have been treated with unjustified severity—and that course should remain open. There is always the possibility that an individual teacher, moved by anger or by some less natural reaction, may inflict serious harm on a child through corporal punishment administered beyond reason.

But the results of the trial at the interior town should serve as a reminder to over-solicitous parents that they can be placed in an embarrassing position if they run to court without adequate provocation.

At Castlegar this week the position of the average teacher has been substantially strengthened on matters of discipline. This is no invitation to sadism or brutality. It is merely an assurance from a magistrate's court that if a teacher applies judicious persuasion when and where it will presumably do the most good, the court will not interfere.

It Calls for an Apology

IN RELEASING HIS OWN "hand-picked" version of the Shrum Report before the full text was available to the public Mr. Bennett perpetrated an atrocious injustice on at least four counts.

By twisting the intent of Dr. Shrum's words, the Premier gave a totally false picture of the Commission's verdict on Mr. Briggs; he placed Dr. Shrum temporarily in a most embarrassing position, causing him to be severely criticized for what appeared to be warped judgment; he hoodwinked the public with inaccuracies which for some persons may never be overtaken by the truth; and he cheapened the office of premier by using it to publicize unfair comment.

CCF Leader Strachan has publicly apologized to Dr. Shrum for criticism he had voiced based on Mr. Bennett's misleading quotations from the Report. The Vancouver Sun has publicly apologized to Mr. Briggs for its story published on the basis of Mr. Bennett's version of what the Report said and meant. An apology by Mr. Bennett should also be forthcoming but past experience indicates it is not likely.

France and the Alcohol Problem

THERE IS MODIFIED ENCOURAGEMENT in the report that deaths from alcoholism are lower in France than they have been in past years.

Last year, according to the statistics, the number of fatalities amounted to 10 per 100,000—still greater than those dying from tuberculosis in that country, but well below the 14 per 100,000 reported in 1956.

At the same time, the report states, French people still consume more alcohol per head than people of any other country. Chronic alcoholism remains a major problem.

Its gravity will be understood in British Columbia, which has an unenviable record for consumption in relation to other parts of Canada.

And those here who ponder the question of civilized drinking will have occasion to abandon another myth. The myth was that people of countries exposed to drinking at an early age avoided the excesses of alcohol. The record of family wine-drinking in France seems to explode that contention.

Let Him Work It Out

IT IS DIFFICULT TO PRESCRIBE an effective discipline for the individual who stole the safety rope from the Kinsmen-Gorge pool, but the indignation of Reeve A. C. Wurtele over the theft is readily understood.

The value of the line as rope and the cost of cedar floats to keep it up were negligible. Yet, in an emergency, they could have meant the difference between life and death.

The rope has been recovered, cut into three pieces, but the floats are missing.

Perhaps the most satisfactory method of dealing with the culprit would be to require him to splice the pieces together—and prepare other life lines where they may be needed. Give him enough rope and he'd get the hang of the idea that it is not only dangerous to remove such safety devices but troublesome to provide them.

As Our Readers See It

Charity Rackets

Without a doubt the age we live in can only be described as the phase of "rackets."

The so-called "charity" racket is becoming all too Gilbertian, with its bevy of bell ringers and its delightful banquets and teas, to skim the cream off any grand total derived through the use—or abuse—of psychology. The poor deluded taxpayers, who think that they are contributing to the welfare of society as a whole, find that most of their share of the honey goes to the drones. The "give me give me" branch of society are making it so hard for the sheep and the goats to ever provide enough for the shearing.

The prices of food and housing are away over the heads of the O.A.P.'s who have to depend on the pittance of $55 a month alone, and the small income groups to cope with; all are dwelling behind that blinding facade and glaring slogan "the highest standard of living in the world."

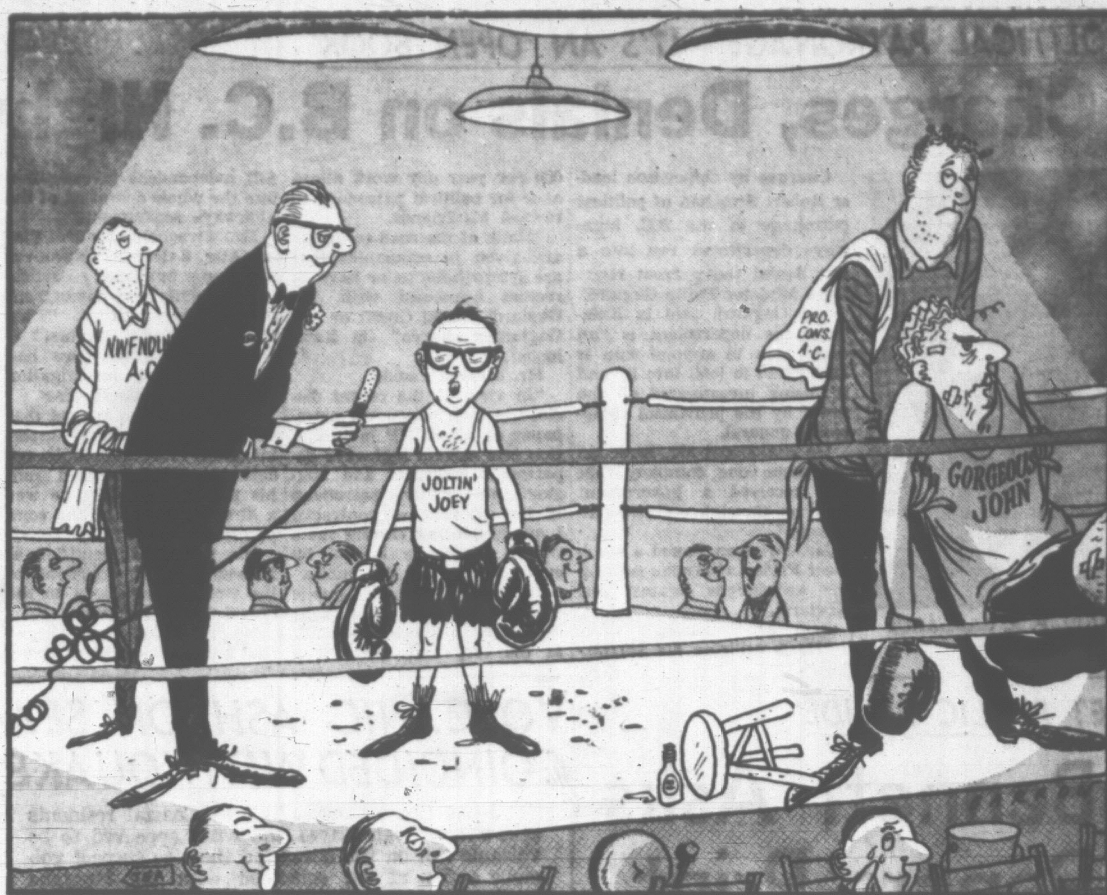

Visitors who have travelled the by-ways of this continent must be amazed at the "big industry of amusement that artificial 'rading' has become."

Perhaps the "faceless" ones hope the distressed and hungry are living under the impression that they—the latter—are existing under the rule that "the meek shall inherit the earth," perhaps! but not while "privilege" owns it.

Demos has joined the other gods in the darkened gallery and all are being rocked by the gales of tainted laughter.

THEY HAD THEIR PROBLEMS, TOO

Rock and Roll in the Ancient Land of the Emperors

EVERY sensible person has a favorite refuge, remote from the dusty concerns of his daily life. It may be parakeet training, or big-game hunting, or just the opium of television, but it serves a necessary purpose.

This reporter's refuge happens to be the past. This confession and self-justification are in order, because China in the millennium of Our Lord has no business creeping into a political column, and ancient Chinese musical criticism is even more out of place.

All the same the knowledge that the old Chinese had a serious rock 'n' roll problem may console parents alarmed by the wild ways of their offspring, moralists who connect rock 'n' roll with juvenile delinquency, and even the Pravda editorial writers who are so horrified by young Communists' taste for Western jazz.

The evidence was discovered in the "Record of Music," a section of the "Li Chih" or "Book of Rites," which was reputedly compiled by Confucius himself.

"The Marquis Wen of Wei," reports the "Record," "asked (Confucius' disciple) Tzu-hsia: 'When... I listen to the ancient music, I am only afraid that I shall go to sleep. When I listen to the music of Cheng and Wei, I do not feel tired. Let me inquire why I should feel so differently under the old and new music?'"

"Tzu-hsia replied: 'In the old music (all) is harmonious, correct and in large volume... In (it) the superior man speaks of and follows the ways of antiquity. The character is cultivated; the family is regulated; and peace and order are secured throughout the kingdom. This is the manner of the old music.'

"But now, in the new music, (the performers) advance and retire without any regular order. The music is corrupt to excess. There is no end to its violence. Among the players... boys and girls are mixed together, and there is no distinction between father and son... this is the fashion of the new music."

"What you ask about is music; and what you like is sound. Now music and sound are akin, but they are not the same."

Tzu-hsia, a square if ever there was one, then finished off the poor, cornered marquis by classifying the particular horrors of different types of the new music, as one might label different rock 'n' roll singers and bands.

"The airs of Cheng go to a wild excess, and debase the mind," he explained. "Those of Sung tell of slothful indulgence and women... those of Wei are vehement and rapid... and those of Ch'u are violent and depraved, and make the mind arrogant... All stimulate libidinous desire and are injurious to virtue. They should therefore not be used."

Presumably these stern words convinced the Marquis Wen, though perhaps without correcting his sad tendency to doze off during performances of classical music. He undoubtedly agreed with Tzu-hsia's reminder that "a ruler... has to be careful what he likes and dislikes." Presumably, too, he was a conscientious overlord of his small corner of Old China. Otherwise, he would just have ordered out the dancing girls and boys, without nervously asking Tzu-hsia about it.

In this debate, furthermore, persons like Tzu-hsia certainly felt just as violently as he is represented as feeling. They had even better reason to feel violently, after all, than the "Pravda" editorial writers, who clearly feel very violently indeed. For this was sacred and magical music the Old Chinese were debating about.

It was performed at the sacrifices to the spirits of the ancestors and the spirits of the land and the grain. It was thought to help the seasons and encourage the crops and strengthen the government and improve public order. No wonder, then, that rock 'n' roll tendencies before the holy altars caused fussbudgets to fuss.

To be sure, if one may judge by surviving and very much later old music of China and Japan, even the music that left Marquis Wen "not tired" would have caused snores at the most respectable church social.

But that is only another proof of the first rule one learns by taking refuge in the past, the rule that everything is relative. And the story of Marquis Wen also proves the second rule, that eternal change and eternal continuity are the sole constants in the life of men.

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

The Last of the Good Things Before School Started

IF any boy in Victoria, scuffling his bare toes through the warm August dust, didn't know that exhibition time was near he should have had his head read. I mean, of course, any little boy maybe "going on 12" who was lucky enough to be living here some few years before the First World War. He wouldn't have any need for a calendar either for the very air was filled with the unmistakable signs of the approaching fair, apart from the fact that this was the one greatest of all late summer events—the last of the good things before school started.

In the ragged hedges along Edmonston Road, now called Bay Street for goodness knows what reason, the crickets were singing their strange rasping chorus and bone-dry seed pods of broom were bursting with little crackling sounds.

Apples, pears, plums and peaches were filling out with sweetness and flavor in hundreds of backyards; in Van Tassel's wonderful orchard and out at Charlie Chinaman's. His place was approached by a long lane snaking out eastward from Cedar Hill Road and the bonanza at his farm was a monstrous tree of small, golden yellow sugar pears.

Out Saanich way, along by Colquitz stream and on Gordon Head, farmers were grooming their great Clydesdale plough horses until their coats shone like polished teak. Doe-eyed Jerseys and placid Holsteins and Guernseys were being brushed and combed; their horns and hooves oiled for the show ring.

And how the farm women worked! In hot, kitchens they stood over glowing wood-fired ranges on which jams bubbled and jellies and preserves were put up with loving care and skilled perfection.

Other scores of women, less interested perhaps in the ageless art of food preparation, produced marvels of needlework. Sometimes a single crocheted tablecloth would represent almost a year of loving toil—a bedspread months of meticulous craftsmanship; or a piece of petit-point to which had been dedicated long, long winter hours by the light of oil lamps or, at best, a Coleman mantle light.

These things were some of the signs of the coming fair, if we had need of them. Which, of course we had not.

You may be sure we had kept close watch on preparations within the fair grounds and had incidentally spotted weak spots in the fences or sections by the racing stables where a smart kid could wriggle through with some degree of safety.

If we were very lucky indeed we might hit on an afternoon when some horse owner was clocking his horses for the running races that were one of the highlights of the exhibition. These splendid races are still run at Ladner and it is, I think, one of the finest and most exciting sports.

The harness of the pacers fascinated me. It was so cunningly arranged that the horse couldn't—at least without damage to the harness—break into a trot or gallop. He ran with each two right legs moving together and each two left legs. Some dogs are natural pacers.

And the driver, seated over the flimsy rubber-tired wheels of his light sulky, was so close to the horse that his arms, extended along the reins, were actually over the horse's rump.

To me it was—and is yet—far more thrilling to watch a good running race than a trotting race. It also appeared so much less commercial.

In the quiet of early morning we would sometimes be allowed to sit on the track rail and watch the driver exercising his pacer, talking quietly to him. If it was a nervous horse—and most of them were. As they swung into the stretch with that peculiar side-wise motion of pacers, with nostrils flared, you could hear their breathing—a sort of "huh, huh-huh, huh-huh, huh"—rhythmic and fast.

Well, there remained just one problem and that was to raise enough money for spending at the fair. Mother always gave us two-bits for admission and we never told her how we got in. She would have said it was dishonest and maybe it was.

So for days before, we scrounged gunny sacks and five-gallon oil cans (kerosene cans) and bottles which were sold to the Chinese junk men. I think we were usually kipped by them.

But we just had to have enough money because one of the stands was selling a wonderful fluffy colored candy that was spun out like silk. It was on a stick and you bit off gobs of it and got it all over your face.

The best—the very best—thing of all was a brand new way of selling ice cream. For a nickel you could get a sort of cake horn that they called a cornucopia, filled with ice cream. You ate the cake and all. Gee!

AUTOMOBILES GALORE, BUT HARDLY A CAR

All the Character and Sparkle of Last Year's Hotcakes

LAST week I celebrated the sixth anniversary of my arrival in this fair city. Since we came overland direct from our point of landing, which was Montreal, our arrival in Canada did not antedate our Victoria debut by more than a few days. The most significant of these anniversaries was the fourth, if I read the fine print on my immigration document correctly. Up to that point I was liable to be deported if at any time I became a charge upon the community, but somehow I managed to stagger across this particular Rubicon, and you would have a hard job to get rid of me now.

If you read these bits of nonsense of mine regularly—and if you do I feel sure you could occupy the time more usefully: learning one of Shakespeare's sonnets, say, or practising your double Matthew Walker—you will have gathered that I believe my coming to Canada was one of the few smart things I have ever done.

We have all had a marvellous time, thank you very much, and hope to keep on doing so for many a year to come.

Since I was a pretty well-seasoned Kipper when I arrived, it is doubtful whether I shall ever look or sound anything else, and I retain a good many of my original kipperistics, for better or for worse; for example, I like to have a good grouse as regularly as possible. It isn't always easy to find something to gripe about, but I usually manage if I try hard enough.

This week, for instance, instead of extolling the beauty of our local scenery, and holding up for your inspection the staggering wealth of our natural resources, human, vegetable, and mineral, I wish to draw your attention to an aspect of life here that you might otherwise overlook. I mean the paucity of interesting motor cars.

I know that Victoria has one of the highest ratios of cars to people in the world, but I cannot remember ever spending so long in one place and seeing so few cars to admire.

Most of the cars are American in design, and while I am convinced that American cars are the ultimate in foolproof transportation for large families over long distances, I find them uninteresting to look at and a dead loss to drive.

It wasn't always thus. Many years ago the United States produced cars of great beauty and fine quality. I remember a Duesenberg and a Cord which won a place in my esteem that they are unlikely to forfeit, although it is more than 20 years since I drove them.

I never achieved the driving seat of a Stutz, although I remember seeing a few in the 'thirties, but they were well-spoken-of by people whose opinion I valued, and they were occasionally seen on the race tracks of Europe.

But on the whole, the last 30 years has seen the development of the American automobile from an ingenious machine bearing the stamp of its designer's individuality into a glittering pantechonicon with all the character and sparkle of last year's hot cakes.

I suppose you can't blame the manufacturers. They discovered a long time ago that it was no use selling cars to people on the basis of one car, one man, one lifetime. They are out to make money, not fine motor cars, after all, and they can't afford to gamble.

Their market researchers are evidently convinced that the average buyer is not looking for fine engineering or technical ingenuity or beautiful lines, and the cars are produced to satisfy a very unsophisticated taste.

It would not be fair to compare London with Victoria in this matter, although London is richer in fine cars than any capital I know. Not just fine new cars, but old ones too: 30/98 Vauxhalls, 38/250 Mercedes, Bugattis of every type from the early Brescia to the 57s, Alfa Romeos of every hue and vintage, Bentleys, Lagondas, Aston Martins, Frazer-Nashes, pre-war BMW's, an occasional Napier or Hotchkiss.

Old cars—and especially these old cars—have a beauty and a glamour that no new car can ever match, but the device must be a car in the first place, and not an automobile. Automobiles are as characterless and dull as the flabby, devaluated word itself. Who wants an "automobile"? But a car, now...

I hadn't been in Nairobi six hours when I saw a Type 36 Bugatti; I couldn't get past the Red Gate in Bombay Docks without passing a well-kept Lancia Lambda; in Durban I saw two 4½-litre Bentleys and a beautifully-restored OM in a short walk round the town.

In six years in British Columbia I have seen only five pre-1939 cars of any interest whatever. Post-war cars of noteworthy appearance are rather more numerous, thanks mainly to a local sportsman of impeccable taste, who changes cars almost as often as I change gear.

Without him, I should be thrown back on the odd visitor and an occasional trip to Vancouver for my car-viewing pleasure. But heaven knows, that is a small price to pay for six happy years. I told you a Kipper could always find something to grouse about.

Begbie Country

KAMLOOPS, B.C.—Kamloops has changed over the years. It is now just another B.C. town surrounded by frame "ranch" houses (whoever saw one on a ranch?) and a u. p. e. r. markets. It is, of course, the provincial capital of the Minister of Highways, who keeps an office there, and the site of a couple of ordnance depots, but apart from that there is nothing but the high dry country around it to recommend it. Certainly there is very little to remind the traveller of the booming days when cattle was king.

But the old Court House still stands, believe it or not! It was the scene of many memorable murder trials, not the least of which was that of Charley Suspachon, the Quilchena Indian who killed Big Bazil, chief of the Douglas Lake band.

Later in the day, somewhat sobered by the encounter, they came to Charley Suspachon's camp, and resumed the party.

It must have been quite a party. It ended with the shooting of Bazil and no end of hullabaloo for Charley.

Charley, it seems, was the one who had shot the chief, so he went and gave himself up to the magistrate at Nicola. When assize time came, he presented himself at Kamloops for trial. Feelings were running high among the Indians; they came in force from Douglas Lake to see that justice was done.

All in all, it was a tricky situation, and nobody was giving any odds on Charley's life, whatever the jury might say. Charley was defended by William Ward Spinks, and his defence was justifiable homicide in self defence. So far as the jury was concerned, the evidence made this a foregone conclusion. Spinks, in his first murder trial, was horrified to find one of the jurors had slept soundly all through his defending speech; so he woke him up and went through it again. By the time he was finished, the judge was smiling, and so were all the jurors. Ten minutes later they found Charley not guilty.

Charley's life hung in the balance for some time after that, while the Douglas Lake Indians debated. Finally they decided not to start a family feud, and let the matter drop. Charley lived to be an old man, and died as chief at Quilchena.

Curiously enough, Charley went blind after the trial. It was this which saved his life. His enemies thought it a better punishment than mere death.

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

The Battle of the Giants

LONDON—I don't know how things are going with magazines in Canada these days, but right now life is precarious for anyone in the magazine business in this country. You never quite know who owns you, or how secure your job is.

Recently the big Amalgamated Press magazine outfit was gobbled up by the Daily Mirror group, the huge concern with newspaper and allied interests not only in this country but in far corners of the globe.

Reyburn

Now Odhams Press (the Daily Herald, the Sunday People, magazines, books, printing plants, etc., etc.) have swallowed the magazine firm of Hulton.

A spokesman for founder and boss Edward Hulton said: "Smaller units are finding greater and greater difficulty in standing alone in the publishing world of today. It is becoming a battle of giants."

Interesting aspect of this is that Hulton Press should have come to regard themselves as a "small unit."

Up until just a couple of years ago they were big stuff—and they put up a posh new building on Fleet Street to prove it.

Prize exhibit in the Hulton empire was Picture Post, first published in 1938 and undoubtedly the best general magazine Britain has ever had. With a forceful policy and lively editing, it had the same stature here that Life has in North America.

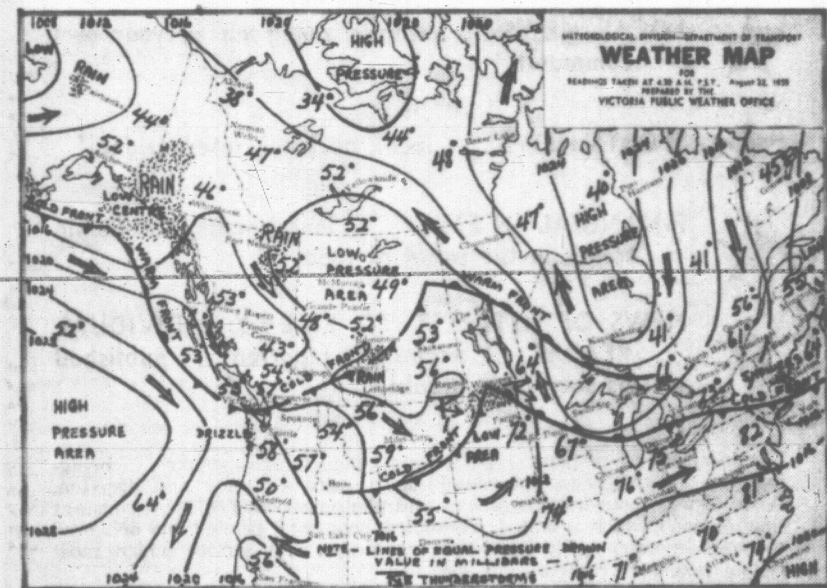

Also they had Lilliput, started in 1937, which was as good if not better than Coronet in its prime prewar days. Others in the group were the women's mag Housewife and Farmer's Weekly, the biggest periodical for country folk. And their comics—Eagle, Girl, etc.—which were genuinely aimed at children and were of a higher and more educational standard than the usual comics.

But barely were Hulton's in their nice new buildings than Picture Post had to fold. Changes of editor took the initial drive out of the publication and Commercial TV siphoning off the ads put the finishing touches to it.

Lilliput, which has also gone through numerous editorial changes, manages to survive, but each new issue is expected to be its last. As Picture Post was, Lilliput is in the general field and all magazines of that type in Britain today have either folded or are tottering.

Only specialist and trade publications can make a go of it. Reason: they provide thorough coverage in a special field which newspaper and TV can't give and through them advertisers can get straight at the people they're after. Thus women's service mags (like Housewife) and trade journals (such as Farmer's Weekly) get by.

But what's left of the Hulton empire could produce no dividends for shareholders last year, so now it's in the Odhams' fold, and employees sleep uneasily after the announcement by the boss of Odhams: "I do not anticipate staff being reduced, but I am not making any promises."

Submarine Model At Exhibition

A model of the first intercontinental ballistic missile-carrying submarine has been added to the U.S. Navy's missile display at the Pacific National Exhibition, Aug. 22 to Sept. 7.

The 32-foot cutaway model reveals the non-secret workings of the submarine George Washington and the deadly Polaris missile.

The Polaris is the first missile designed to be fired from a submerged submarine. It will have a range of 1,500 miles.

U.K., FRANCE HIT BY FIERCE, BRIEF DELUGE

LONDON (Reuters)—Parts of Britain and France mopped up today after violent thunderstorms and torrential rain broke up heat waves.

A 35-minute deluge of three-quarters of an inch of rain swamped London's central train and bus services. Some suburbs escaped without a drop; others were flooded.

Signalling equipment was put out of action and water flooded some lines and stations on London's subway. Firemen answered 672 calls to flooded houses and stores.

On the continent, seven persons were killed by lightning in Yugoslavia and an ancient Belgian church was damaged.

Payroll Plan For Purchase Of PGE Bonds

All B.C. government employees will be able to buy the new Pacific Great Eastern Railway bonds by payroll deduction, spread over a year, Premier Bennett said Friday.

"I shall buy them that way myself," he told a press conference. "I hope everyone in this province will buy at least one $100 bond."

"We are trying to build confidence in this province, and there is no better investment for anyone. As far as I can find out, there has never been a bond issue like this."

He said the bonds would be printed by the Queen's Printer and could be cashed in whenever the bondholder wished.

AFTER ACQUITTAL

'Spanking Principal' Assaulted

CASTLEGAR (CP)—W. Roy Brown, principal of Castlegar's Stanley Humphries High School who was acquitted Thursday on a charge of common assault in connection with a strapping given to a student, said Friday he was assaulted himself in a hotel lobby Thursday night.

Mr. Brown said he was struck on the mouth and on the ear. He said he plans to consult with his lawyer about laying an information charge in connection with the incident.

Circumstances of the attack have been reported to the chief inspector of schools for B.C.

Earlier Thursday, Mr. Brown was acquitted on a charge of assault in connection with the strapping across the buttocks of 14-year-old Anthony White-lock as punishment for truancy.

ALL THE FACTS SHOW THAT THE B.C. COAST LUMBER INDUSTRY IS WELL ABLE TO PROVIDE THE BETTER CONTRACT CONDITIONS REQUIRED BY THE EMPLOYEES.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE MARKETS

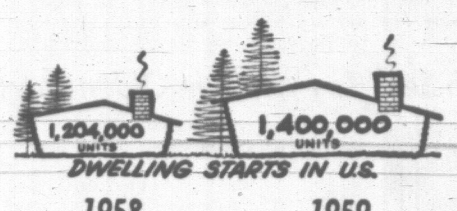

U.S. BEST CUSTOMER

The markets on this continent now take the bulk of the B.C. lumber production and yield the greatest profits. In the U.S. market, the B.C. lumber operators have distinct advantages in lower production costs over all competitors. The base wage rate paid by B.C. lumber operators is 36 cents an hour less than that paid by their American competitors.

HOUSING UP 16%

The increased demand on this continent is largely sustained by the expanded housing program in the United States and Canada, urgently required for the dwellings needed to accommodate the increased number of families. The acute housing shortage assures a continuing demand.

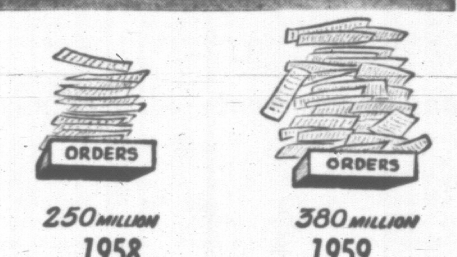

SHIPMENTS UP 13.5%

ORDERS ON HAND UP 52%

PRODUCTION UP 10%

The over-all market demand for B.C. lumber has steadily expanded to the point where production in the province is at its peak.

OUTPUT PER MAN HOUR UP 23%

In order to meet the expanded market demand the output per man hour has steadily increased, thus lowering the costs per unit of production. Fewer men now produce more lumber.

PRICES UP 25%

The increased demand for B.C. lumber has enabled the operators to set higher prices for the principal grades of lumber sold. Wage increases have been in no way responsible for recent price increases.

PROFITS UP 100%

The profits accumulated by the lumber operators are increasing rapidly, as shown by the financial statements published by the principal corporations.

The base rate paid to I.W.A. workers is $1.72 an hour. The base rate paid by the same employers to workers in sawmills attached to pulp and paper mills is $1.95 an hour. The same base rate is paid in their pulp and paper operations.

The strike started and continues because the coast lumber operators have refused to consider an equitable sharing of the vastly increased prosperity of the industry with their employees. Their profits are derived from the natural resources of the province. This places upon them the moral responsibility to help to raise living standards in the province by the distribution of adequate wage income to their employees.

If there is danger of losing markets, as the employers claim, why do they now abandon these markets in order to oppose reasonable wages for their employees?

A WRITER'S DIARY

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

WHEN LAST I WAS IN NEW YORK my eye was caught by a book-seller's display of "A Dictionary of Obsolete, English," by Richard C. Trench, at the very low price of $2.49. New dictionaries of any worth do not come as cheap as that, but there was nothing anywhere on the book to suggest that it was not new; the copyright date was 1958. The language in which it was written suggested scholarship far above the $2.49 level, and also hinted at a much earlier date of composition than 1958.

When I came home, where my books of reference were, it was easy to identify the book as a reprint of "A Select Glossary of English Words, used formerly in senses different from their present," by Richard Chevenix Trench, once Archbishop of Dublin, who wrote it in 1859.

I do not think it was quite honest of the publishers to suppress the fact that their book was a century old; however, its value and interest are unimpaired.

Archbishop Trench, the Dictionary of National Biography tells me, was a notable philologist; he is also a writer of great scholarly charm, and his Glossary is a delight.

He undertook it, he says, because young men are not so well trained in Greek and Latin as once they were, and if this was the case in 1859, how much more is it true today? And without some knowledge of the dead languages upon which English relies, how can purity of speech and writing be preserved?

Obviously by a study of English literature itself, and such a study without a glossary which shows how words have changed their meanings is made needlessly difficult.

Which Sex Was Witch in Olden Days?

This sort of thing is virtuals and drink to me, and I read the Archbishop's Glossary through, with unflinching interest, counting my $2.49 well spent.

I learned that "girl, wench, maid, shrew, hag, harlot, hoyden and witch" were all formerly applied to males as well as females and that men as well as women used to have "wombs"; I learned that "brat" once meant simply "child," without any pejorative sense, and that "censure" formerly meant "opinion" rather than "unfavorable opinion." (Our word "criticism" which once meant simply "an evaluation" is going the same miserable road.)

My knowledge of the Bible was improved, for I found that "by" once had the meaning of "concerning and against,"

Man and Manservant—All I Family

A "ditty" once meant the words of a song, rather than its tune, and "family" meant a whole household, including servants—a change in meaning which suggests that we do not use servants as well as our ancestors.

Eunuch is a fairly late comer to our language, and the old word for such a person was "gelding"; Wiclif in his translation of the Bible calls Potiphar "the gelding of Pharaoh" — which throws a more charitable light on the conduct of Potiphar's wife. "Ghost," as many of us know, means "spirit" and it seems a pity that it has sunk to the level of "spook."

"Lewd" meant merely uneducated, which I knew already, for in my student years I read a delightful book of instruction for the youth of an earlier day called "Learn or be Lewd," which I still think the best title for a schoolbook known to me.

"Lumber" was the collection of unserviceable objects which a Lombard banker accumulated as pawn pledges; it still means junk in England, and embittered house builders suggest that it is working toward that meaning in Canada.

"Manure" was simply "manoeuvre," and meant to till the earth by hand; the Nice Nellyism of our later times has made it the name of what our ancestors called dung.

"Puny" exists in its older form still as "puisne," meaning inferior in the sense of younger; a puisne judge is inferior in rank, not in fortitude.

Some words have suffered at the hands of time. "Shrewd," however, has gone up in the world; it used to mean "unjust." So also with "spinster" which meant a woman of evil life who had been set to spinning in the Spittle, or House of Correction. But, "silly," which once meant "blessed," has sunk through "innocent" and "harmless" to its present lowly estate.

This I fear, a scrappy account of the Archbishop's delightful book, because I wanted to share with you as many as possible of his treasures. But I have not unlimited space, and the time has come when I must urge you, if you like this sort of thing, to get it for yourself.

You will never spend money better.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

Judging from the series of big-scale stamp robberies which have plagued the philatelic fraternity in the east for the last five or six years, it is evident that there is a highly-organized gang of well-informed crooks who are not only expert at committing the thefts without leaving a clue, but who have also perfected a system for disposing of the stolen stamps which has so far eluded detection.

The latest sufferer from the depredations of this gang is Cardinal Spellman, whose collection is of world-wide repute. His volumes of "Religion on Stamps" has won him top awards wherever shown.

His collection was housed in the Regis College Library, in Weston, Mass. In order to reach the stamps the entrance door, and two other doors (one a metal fire-door) were forced, as were three vault-cabinets.

KNEW STAMPS
Ernest Kehr, writing in the "Wholesaler," explains that the burglars must have been thoroughly familiar with the stamps they wanted, as well as with the layout of the various cabinets, etc.

In order to have acquired this knowledge it is suspected that someone in the gang moves in the best circles socially, as only persons of recognized standing who enjoyed the confidence of the Curator, Sister Fidelma, were ever permitted to inspect the cabinets freely. Only the files containing the most valuable stamps were broken into.

ART IN REVIEW

By MONCRIEFF WILLIAMSON

Young Artists of Alberta Justify Faith in Future

About every six months or so I find myself getting all enthusiastic about the development of arts programs in Canada.

Unless one has actually been off the Island and across Canada, gone from one Canadian coast to the other, one can have absolutely no idea of what is signified when one hears the word, distance.

Even a short nine hundred mile jaunt from Calgary via Banff to Jasper, then back again via Edmonton and the MacLeod Trail, is but to cover a small section in one province. Or, as an acquaintance of mine has just been telling me, a trip from Calgary and back, including a few side trips, meant that he and his party covered just over 5,000 miles.

Not is flying across Canada enough if one is to understand what happens between Regina and Winnipeg, and points eastward to Ontario.

Thus I am not writing disparagingly when I declare that as far as the fine arts are concerned, Alberta is at the bottom of the barrel. And if one is to point an accusatory finger, then the culprit—the cause of this falling behind in the provincial arts programs, is distance.

Fortunately, just when one feels most despondent and disapproving one suddenly realizes that the young people have the situation well under control. Their enthusiasm is generated by a species of internal combustion; and as though rallying to the aid of a broody hen, the young artists are quietly establishing themselves in this delightful province and taking matters into their own hands.

As one of them said to me the other evening when I visited his studio, "In Alberta, particularly in Calgary, we artists go about our business quietly. We're not always selling ourselves, pushing out in front as they do on the Coast or back East. Here, we just paint."

Without such bodies as the Calgary Allied Arts Council, guided through the years by the insatiable energy of Mr. A. F. Key, the present state of the arts in Alberta would be even further behind than it is at present. Equally important nowadays is the Fine Arts Department of the University of Alberta, which works closely with the University of British Columbia's extension department.

In Calgary, not only has the magnificent Institute of Technology and Art been installed in modern premises, complete with art gallery, but a new Fine Arts department is also under construction.

Vacuum Remains
In Edmonton—a provincial art gallery is being planned and will replace the present, finally there, is the Banff School of Fine Arts, about which I will be writing next week.

What remains, of course, is the vacuum. While there is a continuous and powerful effort being made to keep abreast of the times, as a whole Alberta remains a stronghold of banal academism.

This is, in final analysis, all the more surprising when one considers the contemporary, forward strides being taken in other directions. Here in Alberta is concentrated wealth. Everything which will foster this wealth in the way of latest equipment, architecture and functional design is liberally encouraged as a means for producing more wealth, and an outer display of material satisfaction.

Only in the fine arts does Alberta lag behind. Yet when one meets these young painters, these hermits gazing out across the distances which are Canada, one realizes that even in Alberta there is justification for enthusiasm—every six months or so.

MAGIC OF BOOKS
"To the African child the school gives the magic of books, the big new powerful magic which is killing and dwarfing all the old, once-potent African magics."

"The school brings in the 20th century, and this, for people still living in the tribal world, is a revelation so explosive nobody in New York or London or Montreal can really conceive its impact." His sketches usually focus on the African peasant and his contact with the "bomba"—Britain's district offices scattered through the colonial territories. Cairns stresses the future of Africa rests on the efforts of the peasant.

"Yet to the world outside he is the unknown African. As African countries develop, students travel to Europe and America. African politicians and trade union leaders go abroad and people meet them and talk with them.

But they never meet the peasant, who forms at least 90 per cent of the population in most of Africa."

Two Centuries Many Editions
THE GREAT EB, by Herman Kogan, University of Toronto Press, 314 pp. $4.95.

This is the story of the Encyclopaedia Britannica throughout two centuries and many editions, a richly informative tale of an outstanding intellectual and commercial enterprise.

And the author seldom loses the opportunity to make the reader smile. On the face of the complex research necessary to the volume, this in itself is no small achievement.

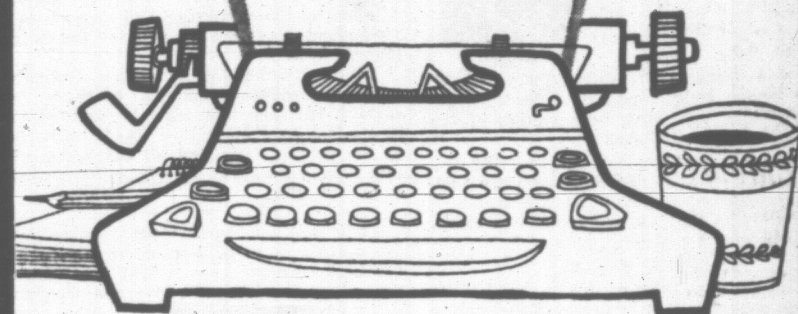

The writing is in terms of human reference, illustrated, for example, on page 213 under "Gandhi, Mohandas K."

Gandhi was invited to write an article on his passive resistance movement. But a note came back from the home department informing the then publisher that "prisoners were permitted to write and receive only one letter each month, limited strictly to private matters," and it was therefore "not possible . . . to pass on your letter to prisoner M. K. Gandhi."

The book is a valuable acquisition.

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

"The Singing Isles"—that was what the Europeans used to call the British Isles in medieval times. It was a title bestowed because, from the hundreds of spires and church towers that dotted the land from one end to another, such a chiming, booming, clangor arose at certain times that the sound could be heard by sailors some miles out at sea.

In modern times the title has been forgotten though it seems to me it is not, in another sense, less deserved. For nowhere on earth is there a finer tradition of choral singing than in those countries that comprise the British Isles. Think of Wales; think of Glasgow and Edinburgh; think of King's College, Cambridge; of Westminster and London; of Belfast and County Derry—all names that are synonymous with world-famous choral music.

Fine Art Requires Discipline

Visitors to Britain tell with awe, of the wonderful singing of the boys' choirs in cathedrals and especially in Westminster Abbey, where boys are schooled musically and trained in the music of the liturgy as they have been for centuries in European cathedral towns.

In Canada we are also busy creating a singing tradition but we could accomplish much more chorally speaking, if a more professional attitude was cultivated and our chorists were schooled to the acceptance of a discipline and pride of craftsmanship without which there can be no truly fine art.

It is all very well to sing for the joy of it but how much deeper and more lasting the pleasure if we set our standards high, strive toward them and even occasionally achieve them.

Training Plan at Christ Church

A step in the right direction will be taken this fall at Christ Church Cathedral, where scholarships will be offered to a selected group of musical boys.

They will become, in effect, choral scholars of the cathedral, receiving a free musical education under the direction of cathedral organist and choirmaster, Richard Proudman.

The boys will be chosen by audition, on their general musical ability, sight reading facility, speaking voices and over-all demeanor, Mr. Proudman tells me.

It is his intention to use this group to expand and enrich the existing boys' choir.

The system, which he has adapted from that in use at King's College, Cambridge, where he received much of his own musical education, will be experimental for the first year.

To me it all sounds most heartening and I certainly share with Mr. Proudman the hope that he will be comfortably deluged with requests for auditions by interested boy singers in the 9-10 age bracket.

Incidentally the boys will have a centre for their study and practice right in the cathedral.

A spacious music room has been created in one of the towers, by cathedral engineer-caretaker, E. M. Stevenson, who has made a fine practical contribution thereby, toward the development of top quality liturgical music in this city.

Students' Stratford Adventure

One of the chaperones selected to accompany a group of students to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival this summer—Miss Christine MacNab—has returned to Victoria full of enthusiasm for the efficient manner in which the tour was arranged and carried out and for its effect on the students.

The 23 British Columbia students were one segment of the total 180 students and chaperones from every province and from the Northwest and Yukon Territories who took this trip under sponsorship of Canada Council, in collaboration with the Stratford Festival Foundation Committee and the Canadian National Railways.

Chosen on the basis of their scholastic work and interest in music, drama, literature and other arts, these young people were able to see the productions of "As You Like It,"

"Othello" and the opera, "Orpheus in the Underworld." They heard a special program of chamber music and were taken on a conducted tour of the theatre, participated in a discussion period directed by Michael Langham, met many of the players and saw two interesting exhibits.

"Can you not imagine," Miss MacNab writes to me, "the memories which these 17 and 18-year-olds would cherish about their journey to Stratford..."

... the Eskimo girl from

Yellowknife, the Japanese girl from

'Ici En Parle Français'

"Our B.C. students," she continues, "found a practical use for the knowledge of two languages when friendship mushroomed between our young people and those from Quebec. From then on, conversations were entirely in French."

I agree with Miss MacNab when she says that this was one of Canada Council's finest projects. It seems pretty certain to me that the council could scarcely find a better way to knit Canada together into a great unified nation.

And I think we can all share in a sense of personal pride over the letter's concluding paragraph:

"We, as chaperones, were proud of the behaviour of these boys and girls..."

And she quotes from a letter from the assistant-general manager of the festival:

"Although some days have passed since you departed after your recent trip to Stratford, the thrill of the occasion is still felt by the people at the festival... very seldom have we had an experience at Stratford to match the three-day stay of the students and chaperones who came from coast to coast to enjoy the hospitality and the programs in the festival city."

HI-FI TALKS

Record Buyers Lacking In Spirit of Adventure

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The wife of a record dealer this week complained that many people won't listen to music that isn't familiar to them.

"We used to order records which we knew would be liked if people took the trouble to listen to them," she said, "but they remained on the shelf because names of the compositions were unfamiliar."

She recalled a Benjamin Britten recording of his St. Nicholas, a work which contains good music and choral singing. It was composed for performance by boys of an English school.

"We would suggest to some of our clients that they listen to the record, but they would brush aside the offer on the grounds they didn't like Britten's works," she said. "They assumed the work was written in the same musical idiom as some of his more advanced compositions."

But the reason for people shunning unfamiliar music, she said, went a little deeper than aversion of the unknown —aversion to the bare possibility of having to listen to something boring and dry.

"They just won't take the trouble to listen or just don't know how," she said. "They go for background music; music that can be heard while they talk and chat over a cup of tea or coffee."

I agree with her. Too many of us today are trying to find means of relaxation and enjoyment the easy way. It can't be done. We are fooling ourselves, as any active sportsman or hobbyist will tell you. The question arose after I had listened to A. P. Herbert, well-known writer for Punch magazine, on a Donegal record. I truly "listened" to this record, and I must confess I found it somewhat dry.

GRUBER CONDUCTS

Good Conductor Like Wine Takes Years in the Making

By HANS GRUBER

What is it that distinguishes an authentically great conductor like Bruno Walter from the more general level of merely good or competent practitioners of the peculiarly elusive art of conducting? Of the latter, there are any number. Of truly great men, there is barely a handful.

Besides Walter, Beecham and Monteux come to mind, a good case could be made for Klemperer; the first three are in their eighties, Klemperer in the high seventies. Toscanini died in 1957 in his 90th year. Eduard von Beinum of Europe's greatest orchestra, the Amsterdam Concertgebouw died recently and all too prematurely just short of 60.

Stokowski is closer to 85 than to the 75 to which he admits. Mitropoulos is unwell in his early 60s, Eugene Ormandy of the Philadelphia Orchestra, in his early 60s, is as vigorous as, and looks no different than, 20 years ago.

Szell of Cleveland, Reiner of Chicago, Steinberg (the baby in the fifties)—in these few men (though there just may be others of whom I do not know) lies the greatest hope that they may worthily assume the mantles of the giants—Toscanini, Walter, Beecham, of Monteux.

Conductor saved

Conductors, of all musical performers, are the most difficult to judge by even the most experienced of the lay public. Anybody can hear a wrong note played by a violinist or any instrumentalist; whereas a conductor "playing a wrong note" is, as often as not, saved by the orchestra.

No wonder orchestral musicians are wont to say "a good thing a conductor can't play out of tune."

One begins to wonder whether it is, in fact, a matter of sheer age before a conductor is able to realize his true potential. Stokowski pointedly summed up the whole business when he said that conducting is the easiest thing in the world to fake, but the most difficult to do properly.

Age may well be the decisive factor here. First of all, there are more "pieces" for a conductor to learn than for any instrumentalist—more music exists for orchestra and opera than for any other "instrument." Then, each piece consists of many "voices," not just one. It takes decades just to learn the basic orchestral and operatic literature.

SELFLESSNESS KEY

It takes more years to learn to conduct BADLY than to learn to play any other instrument well.

And, perhaps most important of all, when the literature has been learned and the technique mastered, a state of mind of complete and utter selflessness, a preoccupation with nothing but the mind of another—the composer—must be achieved.

With these conditions fulfilled, we have a great conductor, we have a Bruno Walter. It becomes clearer now why the relative rarity of great men in this business, and why age may well be an inevitable circumstance.

The wordy struggles of a younger man—the achieving of recognition in that most difficult and elusive of careers—must be over and done with.

Reventlow Fiancee Finds Life a Ball

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—What kind of a girl is rich boy Lance Reventlow marrying?

Jill St. John is a girl-next-door rather than a glamorous kind of beauty, with big hazel eyes and brick-colored hair.

She had done a lot of living in her 18 years—radio actress at six, high school graduate at 14, married at 16, divorced at 17.

She is a bright conversationalist, reads two or three books a week, digs classical music and shares Lance's love of the exciting life. She is no longer concerned about her future husband's safety.

"Lance does all the dangerous sports. He skis on the water and snow, he rides a motorbike and he has raced cars all over the world. But he has never broken a bone. That proves that he understands the dangers he is up against."

NOT AWED BY MONEY

She is not awed by his money. "He isn't as rich as people think he is. Besides, my parents are not exactly eating at the mission. I have always been well cared for."

She doesn't want to change Lance. "We like each other as we are—that's why we're getting married. I get a kick out of these women who say they can hardly wait to marry a man so they can change him. Then afterwards they wall. 'You aren't the way you used to be before we were married!'"

She has had starring roles in two films and is devoted to her acting career.

"It's a gas! I can't think of a more fun way to earn a living. Lance wants me to continue with it, and there's no reason I shouldn't. I'm making some progress now; my career is catching up with my publicity."

She is not a member of the beat generation. "I go to the coffee houses on the strip and see the long-faced souls trying to look beat. I'll bet they go home and gloat, 'I was a good beat today.'"

"They're so stupid. Life is a ball!"

Two FOR THE Show

AA (Uncle Class)
A (Don't Miss)
B (For Rating Days)
BB (Worthwhile)
C (To Put in Time)

(A—FOR THE YOUNG) "DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP" (Capitol)—In spite of the fact that Jerry Lewis' latest bit of malarkey doesn't seem to be as crammed with action as his other offerings, Paramount's "Don't Give Up the Ship" makes fine summer holiday fare for the young and shouldn't press too hard on the nerves of accompanying adults.

"Don't Give Up the Ship" starts off with a prologue, an offering of thanks to the U.S.N. for its co-operation and for the service's "sense of humor." The sailors must have gobs of it. For if the U.S.N. boasts an officer-quarter so queer as that portrayed by Lewis it is remarkable, as the admiral in the piece puts it, that we won the war at all.

In this instance Lewis is a very forgetful fellow. He can't remember what he did with a $5,000,000 destroyer-escort at the close of the Second World War. Admiral Robert Middleton demands an accounting in spite of the fact that Lewis is honeymoon-bound with bride Diana Spencer.

THE PLOT IS FAIRLY brisk and reasonably alive with Lewis' antics and wild face-pulling. Funniest scene, however, is when he must share a train stateroom with Ensign Benson: a gorgeous, blonde psychologist assigned to make him recall what he did with his warship. As can be expected bride Diana is somewhat upset when she meets the train to discover the sex of the ensign.

Like all Lewis solo efforts these days, however, I find myself awaiting for the arrival of Dean Martin. When he doesn't show up I always feel somewhat disappointed. Lewis still needs him to "straighten" for him and Martin's songs can only add to a film.

The pelican derives its name from the Greek word for ax, "pelekus," the shape of its huge beak.

BY INTIMATE STAGE

Controversial Play To Be Presented

Amateur theatre season in Victoria is to open early and on an auspicious note. Choice by the Intimate Stage players' group, of John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger"—one of the most talked about plays of the century—sets a worthy standard that will not be too easy to emulate.

The play, which is being directed by Flora Nicholson, well-known veteran director on the local drama scene, is to be presented at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Sept. 10, 11 and 12.

Early date is made necessary by the fact that two members of the cast—Margot Thomson and John Gilliland—will return to university later in the month.

Also in the cast of this controversial and stimulating drama are Tony Nicholson, festival best actor award winner, Daphne Leggett-Willis and Evan Jones.

John Gilliland will be remembered for outstanding portrayals of leading characters in Victoria College productions of "The Crucible" and Bernard Shaw's "The Applecart."

Virtues Of Brick Find Favor

Brick has won an impressive foothold in western home building by proving itself in outdoor living areas and in prestige construction like fireplaces, planters and patios.

The same time-defying, trouble-free qualities of brick which make it indispensable in these areas are just as significant in the construction of the actual house.

For those who want to combine permanent beauty, durability and modern design, brick is weatherproof, fireproof and colorfast.

The first power mower was turned out in 1890 by Leyland Motors, an English firm. It weighed half a ton and was operated by a steam engine.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Close Attention to Requirements 'Must' for Beginner Exhibitor

By JACK BEASTALL

The next step in preparing garden produce for entry in the various fall shows concerns the flower grower and the classes for disbudded specimens. Dahlias, and certain types of roses and chrysanthemums come in this category.

A disbudded specimen is one which all buds have been removed so that one main flower remains on the stem. Disbudding must be done when the buds are small so that the specimen gives little indication by show time that there could have been other flowers on the same stem.

The beginner should do some disbudding immediately, both for practice and to obtain some specimens which may be of exhibition quality.

Opposed to the disbuds are the sprays. All the flowers are allowed to develop on a spray, sometimes with the exception of the first flower to open. Quite often the removal of the first bloom encourages the rest of the flowers to open at nearly the same time, whereas leaving it may delay the opening of the others.

A spray (sometimes called a "cut") is one complete growth with its main head of flowers and any flowering lateral growths which naturally occur.

Kinds and Varieties

Classes for a collection of vegetables are the greatest attraction to the beginner. In addition to the ribbon or cash award there is usually a trophy at stake.

These classes call for a collection of four (six or nine) distinct kinds of vegetables and the entrant must realize the difference between kinds and varieties.

Potatoes, carrots and lettuce are distinct kinds of vegetables, and roses, perennial asters and delphiniums are distinct kinds of flowers.

Netted Gem, Warba and Early Rose are varieties of potatoes; Gravenstein and Wealthy are varieties of apples; Peace, The Doctor and Crimson Glory are varieties of roses.

When a show is governed by the rules of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, there are three exceptions to the above definitions, and the would-be exhibitor should make sure whether groups affiliated with the RHS recognize these exceptions or not.

For show purpose only, the RHS allows white and red cabbage, savoy, kale and Brussels sprouts to be considered as distinct kinds of vegetables although they are actually varieties of cabbage. The related peaches and nectarines, and the related black and white grapes are also allowed as distinct kinds of fruits.

Point System

In circular 50 of the B.C. Department of Agriculture there is a table stating the relative point value of vegetables for exhibition. This table is often reproduced in show schedules for the convenience of exhibitors.

Perfect specimens of radishes or Swiss chard are worth only two points, while lettuce, corn and beans command seven points and potatoes top the list with 10 points.

Since each collection within the class will contain different kinds of vegetables, the winners are determined on the number of points obtained. It follows that a collection of those kinds of vegetables with high point values will have the edge on a collection of low point kinds, all other factors being equal.

When a plate of vegetables or fruits is called for, the number of specimens to be shown is sometimes listed in the schedule or may be obtained from circular 50.

Cleaning Problem

Strawberries, blackberries and cherries, for example, require 24 specimens to a plate, while currants require six bunches of the red or white varieties and one-half pint of the black.

The cleaning of vegetables and fruits poses a problem for the beginner. While no soil should be left adhering to any vegetable, washing and scrubbing is not practiced because of the damage it can cause to the skin surface. Dry soil can be removed with the fingers, or by careful wiping with soft sacking.

Fruits having a natural bloom, such as plums and grapes, must be most carefully handled so that the bloom is not marred. Apples and pears are often wiped over with soft tissue paper.

Watch for plural endings to words. Where the words variety and type are used, only one variety or type must be shown, but used in the plural (varieties or types) the greater assortment one can show the more points will be gained. This applies to collections of annuals or perennials.

Arrangements

Be sure to note the section under which a class is listed, and any special rules applying to that section. You will find classes for bowls, baskets and vases of flowers in both the artistic arrangement section and in the specimen, or general, section.

Under artistic arrangements, the actual arrangement and composition counts for more than the quality of the individual blooms, but in the specimen section each bloom is judged on its own merits and must be near perfection.

When a class in the specimen section calls for a bowl (or other container) of sweet peas, and the number of stems to be included is not stated, the container should be pleasingly filled with no gaps or holes in the general contour.

No Competition

Finally, a few words on judging and awards. There are general rules which govern all judges as well as the special instructions, given by individual organizations.

When there is no competition in a class, that is, only one entry, it is generally accepted that a first prize cannot be awarded.

This is reasonable when you consider that awards are determined by comparing one entry against another and deciding which is good, which is better and which is the best. Obviously, no comparison is possible when there is only one entry and therefore no "best" entry exists.

However, if the judges feel that the only entry in the class is up to first prize standards, they are permitted by some organizations to award a second or third prize, or an "award of merit," in recognition of the quality. This does not lower the standard of the entry in any way because it results only from lack of competition.

Many gardeners wonder why some organizations give only ribbons while others give cash awards. The reason hinges on the word "amateur."

An amateur is one who practices any art, study or sport solely for pleasure and not for cash reward, so that members of any group formed for "amateur gardeners" can only accept ribbons, certificates or trophies as prizes.

This rule is so strictly enforced in some organizations that a gardener who accepts cash for a bunch of flowers, a plant, or a few berries from his garden, or receives a prize in cash from another organization, immediately loses his amateur standing.

It is wise for would-be exhibitors to be sure of their amateur standing before entering restricted shows, because it is most embarrassing to be disqualified after the awards have been made.

Kerosene Kills Scale Disease

Ivies and ferns are often afflicted with scale-sucking insects under small brown or grey oblong masses, sticking to leaves and stems.

Scale is an insidious deadly pest, often mistaken for seeds. To kill, mix a teaspoon of kerosene in a gallon of warm soap suds, not detergent powder, and swish the leaf growth into it several times by inverting the pot and holding in the earth with your finger.

Do not allow the solution to soak into pot or earth. Then turn the pot on its side over the edge of a table and allow it to drain and dry for six hours.

Then rinse well in clear, tepid water, repeating treatment if insects should return.

For ferns use one-half teaspoon of kerosene in a gallon of water.

Divide That Room But Keep It Light

Most home-owners like a small division or the effect of division between certain areas, such as entries, living and dining areas.

Room dividers are the answer to this problem. They must serve the multi-purpose of a dividing effect yet not cut out light, blend with the decor and serve a useful purpose.

Happily, there are many ways to solve this problem. Waist-high partial partitions which contain cupboard doors for china, glassware and plants serve the purpose admirably.

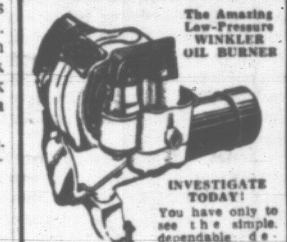

In living and dining room areas, panels of glass block may be used to brighten dark entrances or partition off a room.

Strips of bamboo, wire, vertical blinds and poles from floor to ceiling, combined with planters, are effective dividers and still provide light.

Summertime Best Period For Furnace Checkover

The wise homeowner will attend to the seasonal check-up and cleaning of his furnace during the inoperative season to ensure that the heating system will operate efficiently when the cold weather sets in again.

On oil burning heating equipment, the electrodes, nozzles and both air and oil filters should be checked and any faulty parts repaired or replaced.

Hot water heating systems should be inspected every year by a qualified serviceman who will also check for corrosion, mineral deposits in the circulating system and leakages. The best time for this inspection is in the fall, sometime before the heating season begins.

Water should be left in the boilers during the inoperative period to prevent serious damage that might result from firing an empty boiler.

CHECK MOTORS

Electric motors that operate pumps, blowers, oil burners and coal feed screws should be examined. Worn out brushes should be replaced and other adjustments and repairs carried out by a qualified electrician to ensure smooth operation of the motors until the following spring.

Gas fueled furnaces require little attention, once the proper air shutter, gas valve and regulator adjustments have been made by the utility serviceman. A yearly check-up, however, is a wise precaution.

Chimneys should be inspected, to see that the masonry is sound and that the mortar is holding properly. A faulty chimney can become a fire hazard.

At least once a year dust should be vacuumed out of hot air grills to permit clean circulation especially when they are located in the floor. If inflammable objects such as combs or plastic toys have been dropped in the hot air registers they should be removed before the heating system is put into operation again.

The oil tank should be filled at the close of the heating season to prevent undue condensation inside the tank during the summer. Condensation gives rise to corrosion and sediment.

THE WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL
The last week of August may well be utilized in finishing all the garden projects so hopefully started during the summer.

Actual construction work such as paths, walls, fences and gates may safely be left until September if there is to be no great planting spree then.

Preparation of areas for fall planting can be continued if you don't mind sacrificing a week or so in bloom of the summer annuals.

Where certain shrubs or other plants have outgrown their usefulness, remove them now.

Prepare greenhouse for bringing in of pot plants tender to frost. Clean benches, glass and floor area.

Small plants of pelargoniums if potted up now will give interest to the greenhouse or indoor window area. Include scented leaved, ivy leaved and the zonals as well as the Martha Washington types.

Seedling plants whether for outdoors or in, should be given every advantage for growing before the cooler weather and shorter days.

The showy cinerarias and greenhouse primulas for winter will still do best with plenty of air.

Violet runners should be removed from parent plants. Peg down and root only those needed for propagation.

The potted arum or calla which has been resting for a month may now be re-potted into sandy loam with a little bonemeal added.

Pick and use all vegetables

FAST-RISING STAR SET TO CHALLENGE DURELLE

BAIE STE. ANNE, N.B. (CP)—Chris Shaban, manager of Canadian light-heavyweight boxing champion Yvon Durelle, said today he has received a $10,000 offer to match Durelle with fast-rising light-heavyweight Von Clay of Philadelphia.

Shaban said he received a telegram from Philadelphia promoter Herman Taylor this morning.

He would make no comment except to say: "I'll have to talk it over with Yvon."

Durelle, who lost Aug. 12 to champion Archie Moore in Montreal, said earlier he knew nothing about the offer.

Promoter Taylor and matchmaker Pete Moran said: "We're guaranteeing Yvon Durelle . . . $10,000 to fight Clay on Oct. 9 in Philadelphia."

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (NEA)—Thirty years ago the president of a Los Angeles building and loan company admonished his representatives that the firm could grow only as fast as the community. He ordered each of them to devote an afternoon a week to its general development.

That's how Perry T. Jones, who had been city champion, became secretary of the Southern California Tennis Association. There is some question as to which has benefitted most through the years from the tireless efforts of Jones—southern California or American tennis.

Jones, 71 and looking 20 years younger, has had a hand in the development of numerous top players, including seven national champions—Johnny Doeg, Ellisworth Vines, Bobby Riggs, Ted Schroeder, Jack Kramer and Pancho Gonzales.

Made captain of the Davis Cup team a year ago, Jones immediately brought it back to this country with one quick move. There was some objection to Alex Olmedo being made a member of the United States side, but Jones pointed out that the crew-cut Peruvian was strictly a southern California development and had been in this country for three years. Besides Jones had a precedent. Anthony E. Wilding was imported from England to team with Norman E. Brookes and put Australia in the Davis Cup picture in 1907.

Jones is a machine-gun conversationalist with the direct professional approach. You can't get results sitting on your britches and Jones quickly showed the United States Lawn Tennis Association how to get off.

President of the Southern California Association for the past four years, Jones organized the Tennis Patrons' Association and the Youth Tennis Foundation, which enable wealthy people of his section to contribute for the betterment of the game.

The three organizations visualize the greatest tennis centre in the world with 40 courts, so everybody can be taught and play. The Youth Foundation hopes to either put in coaches or assist them in 400 high schools.

All courts in the new plant will be of cement, the surface Jones hopes to make international. The idea is to eventually have the United States Championships and the Davis Cup Challenge Round played on the cement centre court of the Los Angeles Tennis Club.

Jones will talk for hours on his favorite subject—cement courts.

"Ninety-eight per cent of the world's courts are of clay," he stresses, "and that's the worst surface. Glass courts are limited to Australia, Wimbledon and Forest Hills. Cement and grass courts reward the attacking player, the clay court puts a premium on defence. Inasmuch as practically all of our players are developed on cement and it insures the truest and fastest game, why not go all out for the American way?"

Jones took charge of the juniors with the Davis Cup team, and this country has never had such a fine class. Butch Buchholz is freshly graduated from the juniors and directly behind him are a whole batch of remarkable young shotmakers, headed by Chuck McKinley, Paul Palmer, Dennis Ralston, Marty Reinson, Billy Bond and Ramsey Earnhart.

Jones has Buchholz and the six foremost juniors along with this year's Davis Cup team.

"Treating them as adults, they play that way," he says. He calls Ralston, just turned 17, the finest junior in the world, besides Earnhart the most improved.

Perry Jones not only brought back the Davis Cup quicker than you can say Harry Hopman. He's seen to it that the United States will keep it for a while.

Dave's Overtime Job Bolsters WT Position

Dave Emery proved once again Friday that Dave Emery is a handy fellow to have around a baseball diamond.

The teen-ager pitched and batted Wakeman-Trimble to a 10-inning, 5-4, decision over threatening Naval Vets in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park Friday.

Victory virtually assured the WT's of a third-place finish and the last playoff berth.

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Well, Momma, I guess I got to tell you. Things ain't all beer and pretzels here in the land of the free and the home of the Braves. I wouldn't want to say everybody is crying in the beer, but along about the eighth inning lately the suds are pretty salty and ain't quite so full bodied.

Don't count us out, though, Momma. The faithful has got up a saying to go with the tough times.

"With Spahn and Burdette," the saying is, "we'll win it all yet, already."

Anytime this Spahn and Burdette saying is pretty confident talk, especially the way old Werner Spahn—that's the way we call it up on Villard Ave., Momma—throws at them Giants Thursday night. The baseballs was falling out in the outfield from them 15 hits until you didn't know whether you was at County Stadium or maybe Schultz's driving range was renting the outfield.

But don't forget, Momma, old Werner was working with one day's rest, and this is the first time in five rousing attempts this year they have tried him out of the W column. With this average and the help of maybe a timely tornado or two to fill out the rotation, Momma, we could start counting the world series money.

S. Lewis Burdette, Momma, is one ahead of old Werner already with 17 games in the bank. That is pretty near a month ahead of last year, when it was September the 12th that Old Lew notched No. 17. Together they got 33 put away, Momma, which is two more than all the rest of the Milwaukee's best has been able to do among them.

And they're very healthy, Momma. Like you remember from October, 1957. They get healthy when everybody else

FAREWELL FROM FRIENDS

Surrounded by young players whom he helped coach, Doug Fletcher, president of the Greater Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association, says goodbye. Sox Doing It The Hard Way

By United Press International
Chicago White Sox are working on their first pennant in 40 years and, brother, they're doing it the hard way—almost entirely with singles.

When it comes to hitting home runs, the White Sox are low men on the American League totem pole, but when it comes down to winning games on singles, they can give lessons to everyone.

That's their particular speciality and they demonstrated it for the umpteenth time this season when they defeated Washington Senators, 5-4, Friday night to preserve their 2½-game lead over the second-place Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox collected nine hits in their win over Washington. Eight of those hits were singles. The only extra base blow was a double by Bubba Phillips.

STALEY WINS

Pinch-hitter John Romano's single with the bases loaded in the sixth inning put the White Sox ahead, 4-3, and singles by Jim Landis and Phillips sandwiched around an infield out produced what proved to be the winning run in the seventh. Gerry Staley, who worked only one inning in relief of starter Dick Donovan, picked up his seventh victory.

The Indians blanked Baltimore Orioles, 5-0; Detroit Tigers beat Boston Red Sox, 2-0, and New York Yankees defeated Kansas City Athletics, 9-7, in other AL games.

San Francisco Giants increased their National League lead to 2½ games with a twin-night sweep over the Philadelphia Phillies, 6-0 and 10-6; Los Angeles Dodgers edged Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-5; Cincinnati Reds topped the St. Louis Cardinals, 2-1, and rain washed out the Braves-Cubs' game with Chicago leading Milwaukee 1-0 in the third inning.

JACK'S REVENGE
Southpaw Jack Harshman, a Baltimore discard, held his former Oriole teammates to three hits in pitching Cleveland to victory.

Left-handers Johnny Antonelli and Mike McCormick pitched the Giants to their double-header sweep over the Phillies. Antonelli scored his 17th victory and fourth shut-out with an eight-hitter to beat Robin Roberts in the opener.

McCormick gained his 11th triumph in the nightcap although he wilted in the 90-degree heat and needed relief from Stu Miller in the seventh. The Giants broke the game open with a seven-run rally in the fourth, highlighted by Willie McCovey's two-run triple.

BEER SEEMS A LITTLE SALTY . . .

Sure, Momma, It Wouldn't Be the Same

There is some other sayings too. One of them that I can tell you is something about that Bill Rigney slowly choking to death on bratwurst. Willie McCovey and some of them other San Franciscos is welcome to join in. They talk about our attendance falling off a little. Momma from the faithful maybe drowning themselves along with their sorrows. To see Rigney turn blue you could fill the ball yard on the banks of the Menominee at 6 a.m. Monday morning.

Anytime this Spahn and Burdette saying is pretty confident talk, especially the way old Werner Spahn—that's the way we call it up on Villard Ave., Momma—throws at them Giants Thursday night. But don't forget, Momma, old Werner was working with one day's rest, and this is the first time in five rousing attempts this year they have tried him out of the W column. With this average and the help of maybe a timely tor-

Rocks Hurt More Ways Than One

Irish Trio on Injured List; 4th Game on Tap Monday

Victoria 7, Vancouver 15

VANCOUVER—Victoria Shamrocks get another chance to wrap up the best-of-five Intercity Lacrosse League semifinal with Vancouver Carlings at Memorial Arena Monday, but whether or not the Rocks will be in any condition to take advantage of their home floor is another matter.

The Irish were battered and beaten Friday night at Kerrisdale Arena as the Carls, with their backs to the wall, staved off elimination rather handily by thumping the Shamrocks 15-7.

The Rocks, holders of a 2-1 series lead, will be in position to wrap it all up Monday at Memorial Arena, but they may not be favored.

TRIO AILING

Injuries appear to have perceptibly weakened the club, and both Bob McKee and Bert Bertoia are expected to be on the sidelines Monday. Defenceman Derry Davies is another doubtful starter.

McKee injured his ribs in the second game and may still be out of action while Bertoia sustained a knee injury Friday that could cause trouble. Davies, McKee and Bertoia all failed to finish Friday's game.

Jim McNeill, while able to play, was not at his goal-busting best Friday and still may not be up to par for the fourth game as his injured foot is still troubling him.

Other Irish are suffering from various minor bumps and bruises—many of them sustained Friday as Shamrocks learned a lot of respect for the Carls.

NEVER IN CONTENTION

Shamrocks were never in contention Friday as Gordie Johnston, spectacular in the first two games, cooled off somewhat.

Carlings grabbed a 4-0 first-quarter lead and never looked back as Dave Unwin, in the Vancouver nets, proved to be a puzzle to Victoria snipers all night.

Only Ron Jay scored more

Wrong-Way Giants Finally Halt Skid

By The Canadian Press
Salt Lake City Bees powered their way into the lead in the Pacific Coast League Friday night as the stumbling Portland Beavers dropped a pair of games and the Phoenix Giants snapped a losing string at 14.

The Bees, pounding out 12 hits, romped to an 8-2 decision over the Sacramento Solons while the Beavers were dropping 3-2 and 9-5 games to the Spokane Indians.

The Giants, coming alive with 10 hits, including a pair of homers, drubbed San Diego Padres 9-1. Vancouver Mounties got only two hits, but one was Frank Kellert's home run, in defeating Seattle 1-0.

COAST TEAMS TO IGNORE B.C. PLAYOFFS?

A motion that the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey Association withdraw from B.C. minor playoffs will highlight the agenda when the coast group holds its annual meeting Aug. 30 in the Kerrisdale Community Centre.

The motion has been put forward by New Westminster and seconded by Victoria, but is expected to receive stiff opposition from Nanaimo and most mainland delegates.

Players' loss of time from school in the pre-Easter exam period is the main reason for the motion, a Victoria hockey official said today.

CRICKET

Power Shifts East

VANCOUVER (CP) — Generally, the calibre of cricket in Canada has improved since 1951, but the balance of power has swung from west to east in the eight-year span since the Marylebone Cricket Club last sent a touring team across this country.

More important, however, says MCC, playing manager John Thompson, are the signs among Canadian youngsters of a growing interest in the game.

"The last time," he said as he watched the MCC take an easy victory here, "the west had the strongest players, but the east now seems to have gone ahead."

"The West Indies' element seems to be the reason. They (eastern Canada) have quite a lot of West Indies players and these fellows have played cricket all their lives."

UNOFFICIAL MATCH

Then he pointed to an adjoining cricket field where a group of teenage boys were playing an unofficial contest of their own.

"That's an encouraging sign," he said. "We've seen a lot of young boys keen on the game, both here and in the east. That's something we didn't see much of last time."

Thompson, 41, was vice-captain and manager of the MCC side that toured Canada in 1951 and he made his assessment of the current Canadian scene after the tourists had played eight times in the east and four in British Columbia, winning nine and drawing three, one when rain halted play.

The MCC has about a month to go before ending the tour. "The whole tour has been a success from every aspect so far," he said. "We've had a very keen following everywhere."

Crowds have been fairly good. Best was a Saturday turnout of about 1,000 in Vancouver. This was not as large as Vancouver officials had expected, but Thompson said "I've seen a lot smaller at home county matches at home."

England Steps Into Early Lead

LONDON (Reuters) — England, with four wickets in hand, gained a first-innings lead of 149 over India on the second day of the fifth and final cricket test match here Friday.

England's total of 289 for 6 was disappointing. Only 60 runs were added in the two hours before lunch to the overnight total of 35 for no wicket. In that period India dismissed Geoff Pullar and Colin Cowdrey, both falling to medium-pace Surendra Nath.

England has won all four previous test matches this summer.

Results of county matches: Lancashire 339 for 8 declared and 223 for 5 declared; Surrey 333 for 7 declared and 61 for 8; Match abandoned. Nottinghamshire 130 and 252; Warwickshire 135 for 7 declared and 47 for no wicket; Warwickshire won by 10 wickets. Somerset 242 for 5 declared and 187; Yorkshire 275 and 238; Somerset won by 14 runs. Derbyshire 313 for 6 declared and 203 for 5 declared; Essex 235 and 314 for 5; Essex won by seven wickets. Hampshire 20 and 222 for 7 declared; Wiltshire 231 and 139 for 1; Match abandoned. Sussex 274 and 229 for 4 declared; Northamptonshire 232 and 179 for 5; Draw.

SPEED-UP PLAN: THREE SHOTS FROM EACH TEE

This We Have to See!

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Three veteran Indianapolis golfers are going to fix up a course so a man can get off work at 4.30 p.m. and play 18 holes before dark.

The city parks board, fired by the enthusiasm of vice-president Russel Stonehouse, a former golf pro, and Mayor Charley Boswell, an avid amateur has authorized construction of a "speed golf" course.

The basic design is six fan-shaped fairways, each with a single tee and three holes. Reading from left to right, the holes

LOOKING FORWARD TO GAMES

One of the most promising sprinters to come out of Victoria in some time, young Lynn Eves receives a bit of advice on starts from YMCA track coach Bob Hutchison before leaving for Pan-American Games Friday. It will be the 17-year-old Eves' first taste of international competition.

CITY ATHLETES ON WAY

PAN-AMERICAN GAMES

Big Test Coming Up

Lynn Eves figures that competing in the Pan-American Games will be "a real experience" for him.

One would expect it to be so. The 17-year-old Victoria sprinter left by air Friday afternoon on the first leg of the trip that will take him to Chicago to compete for Canada in the Games Aug. 27 to Sept. 6.

He is training in Vancouver today and then will begin the remainder of his trip Sunday.

Eves, one of three Victoria athletes competing in the Chicago spectacle, will go east rated as Canada's second-fastest and most-improved runner. At the games he will join the other Victoria competitors, Dave Anderson, a member of the UBC rowing crew, and Bob Wheaton, Canada's top backstroke swimmer.

Wheaton left Vancouver early Friday for Chicago. Only sensational Harry Jerome of Vancouver is rated faster than Eves in Canadian sprinting circles, but the smooth Jerome is a year older.

Eves hopes that "by the time I am 18, I can do as well as Harry."

Jerome has run the 100 metres in 10.4 seconds while Eves recently did the distance in 10.7, finishing much closer to the speedy Vancouverite than he did earlier this year, when he first put on spikes in national competition.

They will both get all the competition they want from Ray Norton of the U.S., present holder of the world record for the century dash. He did it in 10.1.

Eves, who is still considering a scholarship offer from University of Washington, would also like to earn a trip to the 1960 Olympics in Rome.

But first things first, he says, and right now he's concentrating on the Pan-Am Games.

WINNIPEG RECRUIT

IOWA FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Virgil Duit, 19, a third baseman who hit .441 for Ellsworth Junior College here, has signed a bonus contract with St. Louis Cardinals and will join Winnipeg of the class C Northern League.

In each set will be par 3, par 4, and par 4 or 5.

Each player will hit three balls before leaving a tee. He will hole out on the short hole, then hit his second shots on the next two. He will hole out on the second, then complete the third.

Stonehouse says it will be necessary, of course, to use specially-marked balls. He figures the 18 holes can be played easily in 2 1/2 hours. The design will include numerous sand traps but no roughs.

Ace-Scoring Johnny Feels Sympathetic

No 'Gimmies' in Cowan's Repertoire So Eastern Challenger in Final

VANCOUVER—A confident John Johnston of Vancouver and a nervous Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., teed off today in the 36-hole final of the Canadian Amateur golf championship.

Johnston, 33, his putter almost like a magic wand and firing his first hole-in-one ever, eliminated favored Bob Kidd, a clubmate from Vancouver Marine Drive, 6 and 5, Friday in the semifinals.

Cowan, continuing a string of sub-par rounds, blasted Ron Willey, 23-year-old 1959 B.C. and Pacific Northwest champion, 8 and 7.

It was the way Cowan and Johnston annihilated their opponents that was so surprising.

ALMOST UNBEATABLE

Johnston, who lost out in a record 27-hole match to Ted Leńczyk, Newington, Conn., in last year's quarter-finals, was almost unbeatable, especially on the green. Each time Kidd began to press, Johnston reached back and pulled out a sensational shot.

He made the ninth-hole turn three up, but Kidd cut the margin to one by winning the 10th and 11th. Johnston moved two up with a birdie on the 12th.

After halving the 13th, both were on the short 14th green 60 feet from the cup. Kidd's attempt for a birdie hit the stick and stayed out. Johnston canned his and regained a three-hole lead.

Johnston's tee shot on the short 16th landed less than a foot from the cup and the birdie put him four up.

STOPPED COLD

When Kidd threatened again at the start of the second 18 holes, Johnston stopped him with the ace on the 24th hole.

Using a No. 4 wood, his tee shot dropped 12 feet in front of the stick on the elevated green 215 yards away, flattened out and rolled in.

It was the first ace in 13 years in the amateur, Henry Martell of Edmonton pulling the trick in the 1946 final against Ken Black of Vancouver. Martell also went on to win 6 and 5.

From there Johnston ran out the string.

He was elated over his win, but said: "I know it shouldn't, but it bothers me having won. Bob's a good friend of mine and I know this is the one he really wanted to win."

Kidd has lost three amateur semifinal matches.

Cowan, having trouble getting by Willey in the early holes, used a bit of strategy to upset the B.C. champion and sweep to victory.

Down one at the 11th, Willey conceded Cowan a one-foot putt. However, Cowan asked Willey to play his one-footer and Willey missed.

From there it was all Cowan. The Ontario shotmaker was two up after 18 and quickly salted away the victory in the afternoon round, winning eight of the 11 holes. Willey, shaken by his 11th-hole miss, never threatened again.

JOHNNY JOHNSTON ... bid for glory.

"I knew I had him after the 11th," said Cowan.

EXPLOSION WRECKS OTTAWA

Once-Mighty Als Still Have Touch

By The Canadian Press

For explosive scoring power, Montreal Alouettes still reign as kings of the Big Four. What other club can wrap up a football game in a minute and a half?

It took just that long—well, 95 seconds to be exact—for the Als to tally all the points they needed Friday night to whip Ottawa Rough Riders, although they added three singles later to run the score to 23-8.

The victory in the second round of the young season settled Montreal into a second-place tie with Toronto Argonauts. The Argos lost 16-7 to Hamilton Tiger-Cats, partly through penalties and fumbles.

RECORD CROWD

Pre-game talk of record attendances turned out to be 50 per cent correct. Toronto managed it with 27,554 in their new Exhibition Stadium to eclipse the mark of 26,811 set last year.

After almost 12 scoreless minutes, the Montreal quarterback tossed a long one to Bill Glosson for a touchdown. Ottawa took the kickoff, had to punt, and Etcheverry promptly connected from the Ottawa 38 with the speeding Hal Patterson in the end zone for another.

LONG RUN

Ottawa stalled again; Montreal took possession and half-back Joel Wells scooted away from the Montreal 47 to the goal line with an Etcheverry pitchout.

Bill Bewley converted two touchdowns. He kicked two singles and Etcheverry one to round out the Montreal scoring.

Ottawa finally got into the touchdown picture in the fourth quarter when quarterback Frank Tripucka passed 18 yards to Bobby Simpson after a long march. Mack Yoho converted. The other point came from Gerry Nesbitt's single.

Things were rough and tough at Toronto, where Hamilton lost 95 yards on penalties and the Argos 72.

It was a tight game until the last minute when Ticat quarterback Bernie Faloney raced across on a third-down plunge for a touchdown.

A FORESTER'S TRAVELS
 By FRAN ROBINSON

DENMARK—When I bought my train ticket from Stockholm to Copenhagen I was told that it included the ferry trip across that very definite bit of sea that separates the two countries. But when we got to Helsingborg, I was amazed when the whole train chugged onto a ferry, and we shoved off for Denmark. The trainload of passengers stampeded to buy cigars, chocolates and liquor, tax-free, from the concessions on board. Twenty minutes doesn't leave much time for casual purchases.

Those that survived the crush came on deck to catch a glimpse of the austere Kronborg Castle of Elsinor, made famous in Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

Group of Islands

If you look at a map of Denmark, even an old one (but remember to make allowances for the sandy tip of Jutland which moves a few feet east every year—there'll be real fireworks when it finally hits Sweden!) you will find that it is really a group of islands. Jutland, in the west, is the largest one, then Fyn makes a nice stepping-stone to Zealand, the most populated island. Then away in the east is Bornholm, best known for its remarkable collection of stones.

Jutland is interesting to a forester because of the ingenious way in which the drifting sand dunes in the west have been stopped by afforestation, planting a forest where there hasn't been one before. But the Jutlanders are just as proud of their Skye Mountain, the highest one in rather fat-tish Denmark, which soars to an unbelievable 570 feet!

Zealand is one large garden. Every inch of space is used to advantage in producing food.

European Visit Best in Autumn

Songwriters may plug April in Paris but the chances are they have seen it only from Tin Pan Alley. The great capital is in fact a joy even in winter, when it drizzles, but veteran travelers who have sampled the entire calendar in Europe vow that the best time for Paris is not April at all, which can be rainy, but September—the month that has the clearest atmosphere of the entire year, the greatest number of sunny days and the most enchanting light.

And not only Paris. Most of Europe's capitals enjoy their finest weather in the early autumn months. London usually has clearer skies and less rain in September than in any other month. Rome's weather can be bet on to be golden, with far more pleasant temperatures than during the summer. Vienna enjoys one of its driest months with a minimum of cloudiness. To an only slightly lesser degree, the same is true of Copenhagen, Stockholm and Oslo.

Good weather is just one reason for an unusually large number of bookings for the fall season. Autumn travellers find a choice of transportation and enjoy uncrowded hotels, restaurants and shops. The bookings are not only for travellers going it alone. So popular has fall travel become that escorted and package tours of Europe have been extended throughout September.

Archaeology Lacking In Province

(Wilson Duff, curator of anthropology of the provincial museum, today concludes his series of articles on excavation of the midden at McNeill Bay with a special message about Canada's approach to archaeology. The digging itself will go on for another week and later, when the finds have been assessed, he plans a concluding report).

By WILSON DUFF

Our McNeill Bay excavation is proving productive enough, in its own small way, but we can't honestly claim that its significance is very great. It will fill in a piece of the gigantic jigsaw puzzle of Canada's pre-history, but only a little piece.

However, it's the best we can do right now. We are really only part-time

Duff semi-professionals in archaeology, and can take only a couple of weeks each summer to make token forays into this field.

There isn't really a full-time, practicing archaeologist in B.C. Dr. Charles Borden of UBC does in fact accomplish more than most full-time professionals, but he also has to maintain his position as Professor of German.

Winter Training

Every summer he manages at least one significant survey or excavation—this summer it is the extremely important Early Man site in the Fraser Canyon—and every winter he conducts a "training dig" in conjunction with his course in archaeology.

And there you have it. That is the sum of B.C.'s current "professional" efforts to preserve the records of our prehistoric past. In the other provinces the scale of operations is roughly the same, except that in a few no archaeology is being done whatever.

While we have been scraping away slowly with our trowels, hundreds of other middens more important than ours have been feeling the bite of bulldozer blades and power shovels, as well as the constant erosion of the ever-rising tides.

Bulldozed Over

In Cadboro Bay a new house foundation ripped a hole through thousands of years of the archaeological record. In Victoria harbor an old midden was bulldozed to cover over a newer one, the city garbage dump.

Upland a couple of years ago, and maybe still, a private company mined shell from a huge midden and processed it as chicken feed.

In the interior, a road grader ripped an Indian skeleton from its grave. Engineering studies went ahead on industrial projects that will flood hundreds of miles of river margins and obliterate countless archaeological sites.

We do not have in B.C. nor in Canada as a whole any systematic provision for preserving an adequate sample of the archaeological remains threatened with destruction. We are allowing our archaeological resources to dwindle away with scarcely more than a winge of conscience.

Others Do Better

The same is not true of other nations such as the United States. I'll spare you the painful comparisons, but measured against what other countries are doing, as against the dimensions of the problem itself, our record and immediate promise of accomplishment are sadly deficient.

I suggested earlier to private collectors that they should be willing to accept the obligation to take proper care of their specimens, since after all they are only custodians of something which belongs rightfully to all of the people.

In the same sense, we Canadians are custodians of a piece of human history which belongs not just to us, and we have a similar obligation to preserve it.

Somebody once said that a country without a history is like a man without a memory. Perhaps too, a country that allows its history to be lost is like a man without a conscience. Where does Canada's conscience reside? How can it be reached?

Stunting in Jet 'Not Dangerous'

By DON INGHAM

Flying a Sabre jet with the RCAF Golden Hawks stunt team isn't dangerous.

Dives, slow rolls, loops and low level hanky-panky at 600-plus miles per hour are safe as a church, according to 24-year-old FO Jim Holt, youngest member of the group which will stage a 25-minute display over Beacon Hill Park Sunday at 2.30 p.m.

Not dangerous, that is, if you have had the kind of background to match that of FO Holt.

EUROPEAN STINT

Joining the air force in 1953 after leaving high school in Vancouver, he started air force training right away, graduated on jets, then spent three years with a squadron in Europe.

After that came a year of instructing at Portage la Prairie, and appointment to the Hawks in March.

Sounds simple, but that experience gave him a solid 2,000 hours on jets, of which close to 1,500 hours were spent in aerobatics and formation flying.

"There is not much of this kind of flying done in Canada, but all the squadrons in Europe are doing it constantly," he said in an interview here. "We were all pretty experienced when we were formed into a team, so most of our practice was on staging the performance, getting used to flying together as a group, and improving our routine."

FEW FEET APART

Most people can't believe the aircraft are so close together during their tight formations, but FO Holt insists actual distance between the closest points of adjacent aircraft at times is only a few feet.

Since the Hawks were put together to help the air force celebrate the 50th anniversary of flight in Canada they have had no "close calls" while stunting.

"What you might think is a close one is probably deliberate and calculated on our part," he explained.

The only accident was the worst, and proved fatal to Lt. P. J. Kerr of the team. He was killed Aug. 10 when he collided with a United States private plane while landing at Calgary.

He will not be replaced. The team will continue with four formation flyers, two solo performers, and others necessary to keep the team running.

GET UP CLOSE

FO Holt advised people intending to see the show Sunday to get as close as possible to Finlayson Point.

"Our commentator will be there with his public address system," he said. "Much of our best manoeuvres are close to the ground, and at a distance both the explanation and the performance will be missed."

"It's a good show," he said, "and we like to think it's better paced and executed than those put on by the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds or the U.S. Navy Blue Angels."

They will perform at the PNE in Vancouver, and their last appearance will be at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 22, 23, when they will be on the same program with the Blue Angels and Thunderbirds.

Cathedral to Present Nativity Opera

By PETER MATTHEWS

Christmas is still four months away but at Christ Church Cathedral plans are going forward for a Yuletide celebration event that will be, possibly, one of the most rare and beautiful ever to take place within a Canadian cathedral.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," a mystical music-drama concerning the time of the Nativity of Jesus Christ, is to be performed in the cathedral between Christmas and New Year, with permission of the archbishop and dean and chapter of the cathedral.

The work, composed by contemporary Italian opera composer Gian Carlo Menotti, is on a high inspirational level both as to the music and the simple, moving story which unfolds an imagined incident between a poor widow, her crippled child and the three Kings of the Orient on their way to Bethlehem.

Richard Proudman, cathedral organist and choirmaster, will train the choir and soloists, and Times music-critic Audrey Johnson will direct the presentation.

Peggy Walton Packard will sing the role of the mother and young Timothy Vernon, the child Amahl. The Kings will be sung by Stanley Hoban, Norman Tyrrell and Harry Johns, and the cathedral choir will supply the chorus.

Menotti's 45-minute music-drama was the composer's response to the idea of the Nativity, written as was Handel's "Messiah," in a mood of spiritual exaltation and based on the Italian legend that the three kings—not St. Nicholas—are the children's visitors on Christmas Eve.

It is envisioned by its sponsors and producers here as a rich and memorable experience for all ages, but particularly for the young people of the city.

While this is the first time that a musical work of this nature has been performed locally in a church—and undoubtedly it is the first time anywhere that "Amahl" has been so presented—the combination of drama and the church is as old as religion itself.

In recent years many of the old morality and mystery plays have been revived to be performed in churches at Christmas and Easter.

T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," a verse play was done not so long ago in a Toronto cathedral and here in Victoria there is a delightful precedent in the several performances of the Nativity at St. Barnabas.

Police Probing $600 Burglary In Fairfield

Kitchen Window Yielded Entry

Theft of jewels and household goods, totalling about $600 from an unoccupied Fairfield home Thursday is being investigated by city detectives today.

Burglary of the home of Angus Corfield, 1705 Richardson, was discovered at 12.20 a.m. Thursday, but a list of stolen property was not available to police until today with the return of the occupants from out of town.

Entry was by means of breaking a kitchen window, police said.

Missing are a radio, electric mixer, assorted women's clothing, musical silver-powder box and inlaid jewel case which contained the following:

Silver cuff links, costume jewelry, a gold set ring, gold locket, earrings and pendant, and two gold crosses, one set with a pearl.

The clothing was contained in a plastic case, also missing from the house.

No 'Butt-End' Of Bus Line Says Parrott

President of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Conway Parrott, today took strong issue with a reported statement by Victoria MP A. deB. McPhillips that Victoria was "the butt-end of a bus service to the mainland."

"This remark is quite unfair," said Mr. Parrott, who is general manager of Vancouver Island Coach Lines. "Mr. McPhillips obviously must think the company is still owned by Canadian Pacific Railway."

Mr. Parrott's comment came after the minister said he was "surprised" that CPR apparently planned to abandon its winter ferry schedules between Victoria and Vancouver but keep them going for the "lucrative summer tourist business."

Mr. McPhillips said Victoria would be "at the mercy of a bus line and the Nanaimo ferries to Vancouver" in the winter months.

"I am not one of those who apparently believe our needs can be safeguarded by a bus and ferry combination," Mr. McPhillips said.

"For Mr. McPhillips to call Victoria the butt-end of a bus service is something I cannot get over," Mr. Parrott said. "We have a fast de luxe service to Vancouver that carried 48,000 people last year and will serve about 60,000 this year."

WINNERS OF CROSS-CANADA competitive examinations, two young Victorians will enter College Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean, Quebec, Sept. 3. James G. Skinner (left), 2535 Garden, and Mervyn Lougher-Goodey, 325 Linden, are both graduates of Victoria High School. With 20 others they were accepted for the crack tri-service military college after exhaustive examinations and interviews open to all Canadian high school graduates. (Times Photos.)

Wide Scenic Vistas Opened With New West Coast Road

ACCESSIBLE FOR FIRST TIME to holidaying motorists will be Long Beach, 12-mile stretch of sand between Tofino and Ucluelet, on west coast of Vancouver Island. New road opening Sept. 4 will make vast vacation area out of hitherto isolated beauty spots.

Public Use Restricted Temporarily

Some of Vancouver Island's most spectacular scenery will come within reach of private motorists on the Labor Day weekend with the opening to the public—with certain restrictions—of the Alberni-Tofino road.

Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi has announced the road will be open for public use Sept. 4 at 5 p.m. It will then be open to the public from 5 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily, and continuously on week-ends and holidays.

Tofino and Ucluelet residents likely will cheer the opening of the road more than others on the Island. For years they have agitated for a land connection with the rest of the Island, and they actually put it to use today with a 50-car caravan run to Nanaimo.

NOT YET OFFICIAL

This was a special concession to the area, since the road is still officially closed, and will remain so for the next two weeks.

The road has a gravel surface of from 18 to 20 feet in width.

Restrictions are imposed to permit free use by logging trucks in regular working hours.

The 62-mile route follows nine miles of public road to Sproat Lake then uses 25 miles of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. forest access road. B.C. government built a nine-mile link to connect with six miles of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. road and the public highways joining Tofino and Ucluelet.

LONG BEACH GOAL

Kennedy River and the spectacular sections along the sheer rocky shores of Kennedy Lake will be among the highlights of the route.

But the "pot of gold" at the end of the drive will be Long Beach, the 12-mile stretch of sand facing the open Pacific, and for years the most tantalizing tourist objective on Vancouver Island.

Recreation and conservation department has established several undeveloped park reserves along the route for the benefit of campers.

Employees Meet

Annual meeting of the British Columbia Government employees' Association will include talks on increased wages and the recent strike of provincial servants. Some 80 delegates will meet here Oct. 2 and 3.

ASK The TIMES

Q—I am interested in knowing what happened to the lobster that were brought to this coast a few years ago. R. J. A—The lobsters were shipped in ice from the Maritime provinces and placed in a protective pool at the Departure Bay experimental station in an attempt to see if lobsters would thrive on this coast. This was about 1946. Fisheries authorities say there is no reason why lobsters can't live in these waters, but, regardless of this claim, the lobsters gradually disappeared. The suspicion is they were taken out, and eaten, by a person or persons unknown.

Physical Fitness for Children Big Point With Health Minister

Fire Hazard to Increase With Warm Weather Due

Warmer weather next week is expected to increase the fire hazard in B.C., which in the last seven days has been from low to moderate in the five forest districts of the province.

Here in Victoria today's weather was "exceptional," according to weatherman William Mackie.

"While we had sunshine, most of the rest of B.C. had cloud and showers," he said. A small weather disturbance moving out of the Gulf of Alaska will give a mixture of cloudy skies and sunny periods Sunday, he said, but there is the strong possibility of showers farther up-Island. Winds Sunday will be westerly at 20 miles per hour. Temperatures will range from 53 degrees tonight to 65 degrees Sunday where the sea breeze strikes, and 72 degrees in sheltered areas.

Forest Service reported the Vancouver Forest District, which includes Vancouver Island, has had 756 fires to date this year—highest of the five districts—which were fought at a cost of $78,248.

During the same period last year in this district the cost was $562,590.

In all of B.C. there were 53 new fires last week, lowest figure since mid-July. Cost of fighting them was $32,661.

Indian Show Set Sept. 6

Indians of South Vancouver Island will whoop it up at an Indian festival to be held at Maple Bank Park on the Songhees Reserve, Sept. 6.

Chief John Albany of the Songhees band, said the festival will be similar to the one held each year on the May 24 weekend.

Program will include Indian war canoe races, ceremonial dances and games.

It will also feature a two-man canoe race with an Indian in each craft.

Federal Health Minister J. Waldo Monteith said here today he would like to see a national physical fitness council established to help ensure the health of Canadian children.

"It would be a basically good idea," he said, adding that there was need for "resurgence" in sports interest.

Children today "don't walk when they can ride," he said, and this extended into other fields of their activity.

"I know with my own children I would like to see them taking more part in sports."

GOES TO NORTHLAND

Mr. Monteith, who has visited Jasper, Alta., after leaving here will spend a week visiting federal hospitals in the Yukon at Aklavik, N.W.T.

"We seem to be making real headway in combating tuberculosis amongst the Indians," he said.

At one stage of the Indian treatment program, almost 100 per cent of cases were TB.

MUST BE PAID FOR

Mr. Monteith said he would like to impress the public that the more health services wanted, the more the cost, and it comes out of your tax dollar.

Budget of the health department last year was $1 billion, 400 million, second only to national defence.

The federal government stands ready to share chronic hospitalizing building and care on a 50-50 basis anytime B.C. wants it, Mr. Monteith said.

"We don't tell the provinces what to do."

Mr. Monteith this morning visited Dr. S. F. Blundell, in charge of the quarantine offices here, and left with his family at noon.

Woman Unmissed For 4½ Hours Found Drowned

A woman, apparently drowned, found off Dallas waterfront Friday, was not reported missing from her Oaklands district home until nearly 4½ hours after her body was recovered by police.

She was identified by her husband as Frances Margaret Chapman, 64, of 2530 Scott.

'NOTHING BUT CRITICISM'

Bennett Withdraws

Bid for NWT Area

Premier Bennett disclosed

Friday that he has withdrawn his offer to have the province take over complete maintenance of 600 miles of the

Alaska Highway in B.C. in return for part of the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Bennett said he had only made the offer to "help the federal government" which is paying $17,000,000 a year for upkeep of the highway.

"But they showed no interest and I have had nothing but criticism that 'Bennett is trying to grab the north'."

The premier said he made the offer to Defence Minister

George Pearkes when he was here some weeks ago. At that time, he added, the minister was "interested."

Mr. Pearkes has since said the federal government would need more details of the proposal before giving it study.

In his proposal Premier Bennett had asked annexation of that part of the territories lying directly north of B.C.,

Exchange Teacher Takes Six Years To Make Good a Vow

By Sonja Strandlie

Mrs. Nancy Pittard was an exchange teacher in Victoria six years ago, from Isle of Man.

She had always wanted to see something of North America and what she saw, then, she liked. At the end of the year, when she left for home, she made a vow. She was going to return.

It took five years, and a good deal of determination, to keep that vow. But, a few weeks ago, Nancy Pittard came back. This time she plans to stay for "a few years, at least."

Why did this vivacious school teacher choose the Pacific Coast for her return visit?

She says that before she had ever seen Canada she visualized the country as water, mountains and pine trees.

Six years ago, when she came out on exchange, she travelled by train across the country and she didn't find this combination until she reached the foothills of the Rockies, near Calgary.

This time, she travelled by air, in a TCA Britannia. Again, it wasn't until she reached Edmonton, that she found what she visualized as "Canada."

"It's your western informality that I love," she says, and then tells you about "touching down" at Edmonton; seeing travellers from eastern Canada get off the big plane and a new set of travellers get on.

"The whole atmosphere changed. An airport attendant came aboard carrying a covered bird cage — and how I loved to see it. A group of young people got aboard. They were following an exhibition, and the talk was so light and gay."

Does she find much difference in teaching methods here as compared to the British Isles?

"Teachers are left more to their own devices at home than they are in Canada, where education is conducted at a provincial level," she believes.

The pupils? There is a difference she says. "Canadian pupils are more spontaneous. They talk more to their teachers than do the English students."

In Canada, Mrs. Pittard finds that there are more physical training teachers than "at home."

Career masters in the British Isles are named students' counsellors out here, and their duties are slightly different.

English students, she thinks, "absorb more general background knowledge concerning the fine arts. It's all around them and they get it almost unconsciously."

On the Isle of Man, students are given free ballet and violin lessons, after school hours, when they enter grammar school.

Another extra-curricular activity that Canadian students do not have is a trip to the continent in the summer. In groups of 40 or 50 students, all over 14 years of age, they go on conducted 10-day tours by bus to Norway, Holland or Germany. Students pay their own way, and they sleep in hostels or in schools.

When Nancy Pittard was here on exchange she was impressed by the friendly hospitality she received, especially from members of the PTA.

"I went into their homes," she remembers, "and I met such kindness and friendship."

"There are parent-teacher associations in the British Isles, of course, but unless you are a friend of the family you would not feel free to go into a member's home."

She remembers how, at first, the children out here laughed a bit at her accent. Her class at Lampson Street School loved to hear her say "banana" and "tomato" with the soft "a." And when she said "wheat" for corn and "fortnight" for two weeks, they were openly amused.

"Really, home is very like Victoria," she concluded quietly. But then she listed a few more differences.

They include: "Your houses are so much prettier and so much more individual in plan; the Canadian people work harder and they play harder; your food is so much more varied and appetizing and... yes... I think Canadians say prayer before meals, more often than we do at home."

"Oh, yes... and I do love Canadian central heating."

Mrs. Nancy Pittard, from Isle of Man

Fashion Show and Tea for Campsite Funds

At "Woodwyn," the home of Mrs. W. C. Woodward, West Saanich Road, on Saturday, August 29, a fashion show and tea has been arranged by the Saanich Division of Girl Guides, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Proceeds will go toward completing the Guide and Brownie lodge at Kingswood Camp on Elk Lake.

There will be stalls of novelties, home-baking, white elephant and "green thumb" articles. Fashions will be from Malleks Ltd.

Afternoon tea will be served by the division.

Kingswood Camp, named for district commissioner Mrs. Freeman King, is a lovely wooded acreage on the west side of Elk Lake, where Rangers, Guides and Brownies of Saanich camp. It serves the area of Colquitz, Marigold, Gorge View, Tillicum-Glanford, Royal Oak, Elk Lake, Prospect Lake, Cordova Bay, Brentwood, Deep Cove and Sidney.

Funds to purchase the land and material for the lodge were raised from teas, bazaars, sale of handiworks by local associations, Guides and Brownies.

The lodge was built by volunteer labor provided by parents and friends under direction of Bruce Cooke.

It is to be used as Saanich Guide headquarters, for training and division meetings, for winter meetings of the Rangers, Guides and Brownies, and during camps for sleeping quarters for the Brownies, as only Guides sleep under canvas.

Drive and Persistence Needed To Become An Accomplished Ballet Dancer

By Judy Nicholson

A great love for the ballet and an ability to accept discipline and rigorous training are only two of the main ingredients for becoming a dancer, say two distinguished young Victorians now with professional ballet companies in the east.

Miss Jacqueline Iivings and Miss Sheila McKinnon, home for their holidays, were interviewed as they took a break from practice at the studio where they both started their careers, with the well-known teacher, Miss Wynne Shaw.

Jackie (as she likes to be called) is an attractive fair-haired young woman, who for the past six years has been a member of the National Ballet Company.

"I started dancing at the age of six," she says. "Even at that early age, I was determined to dance, and you see... she twirled on her toes... 'my dream has come true!'"

Jacqueline explains that to reach the place where she is today, there have been years of hard work, numerous sacrifices and even some discouraging moments.

She's taken several leading roles with the National Ballet, including a lead in "Swan Lake" and another in "Prelude to Les Sylphides"; one of the Willies in "Giselle" and Act Four in the Dance Arab of the Nutcracker Suite.

There has been much travelling for her, on tour in Canada and in the United States. "But my favorite trip is always home to Victoria where I can be with my parents."

"I'm afraid the National Ballet won't be coming to the west coast next season, but we'll be back in 1960, I hope."

Sheila McKinnon has just finished her first season with the Winnipeg Ballet.

"And it's been the most exciting year of my life," explains the dark-eyed and petite young lass. A serious dancer since she was 15, Sheila plans to continue her climb up the ladder to ballet fame.

Really only a beginner in the professional field, nevertheless the 21-year-old girl has taken the second lead in "Ballet Premiere" and was one of the images in the "Darkling." In June she wound up a two-month stint on a children's television series with CBC at Winnipeg, entitled "Dancing Storybook," in which she took the lead. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McKinnon of Victoria.

Chatting about the life of a ballet dancer on tour, the girls have many stories to tell. These include such adventures as sleeping on luggage racks on buses; going to bed (if one could be found) at odd hours and getting up at dawn to exercise.

Why do they spend their holidays practicing? They exclaim in unison, "Practice? Oh, we're not really working when we come back to this studio. After a year of tension and rigid discipline in our companies, Wynne's school is paradise."

Jacqueline left last Thursday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Iivings, for a two-week holiday in Hawaii before returning to Toronto and another year of hard work.

"Funny thing, though," says the fair-haired beauty, "when dancing gets into your blood, it really can't be called work. I wouldn't trade it for any other career!"

Sheila leaves Victoria this weekend to return to Winnipeg. She voices the same sentiments about her ballet work, tagging on the phrase: "I love every minute of it!"

Yes, There Are Women Who Want to Gain Weight

While it is difficult for those of us who fight the bulges to realize it, there are women who long to gain weight. Actually, sometimes I think it is harder to gain than to lose.

If you are one of these, slow down! Try to plan your life so that you hurry as little as possible. The feeling of rush and pressure as well as physical activity will ruin your chances for success.

While plenty of sleep is of the greatest importance in a weight gaining try, you will do better if you get up a half an hour earlier in the morning and greet the day in a leisurely manner.

Take time to stretch your arms and legs and twist and turn and yawn before you get up. It is surprising what a difference thirty minutes more can make. This gives you time to relax at breakfast, instead of choking down a light, inadequate meal.

You also will have more time for dressing. Those catch-as-catch-can last minute dashes are not for you! Incorporate as much of this feeling of relaxation into your lunch hour as you possibly can. It might be best for you to take your lunch to work, at least part of the time rather than standing in line and then eating in a hurry. If your place of business provides a place for resting, lie down for 10 or 15 minutes before eating.

When you return home in the evening, take a lazy bath and then rest for a half hour before dinner. I know these suggestions are not always possible to put into effect, but do so if and when you can.

If you are a homemaker, the same rules apply. You will not miss the time spent in little rest periods during the day and will accomplish as much or more with less fatigue if you work in a relaxed manner.

If you would like to have my 9-Day Diet Gaining Diet, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for this leaflet to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY...

Empty Sleeve No Handicap

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A year ago, due to an old infection, it was necessary to have my left arm amputated close to the shoulder. I quickly adjusted to my loss until recently.

I became reacquainted with an old friend (now a divorcee) who insisted she'd be glad to let me escort her places. She assured me that my having only one arm made absolutely no difference to her. I have taken her out several times and enjoy her company.

Now she persists in telling me that my "empty sleeve" is conspicuous although she knows that I can't wear an artificial arm. I am losing confidence in myself. Should I continue to see her?

"EMPTY SLEEVE."

DEAR SIR: Your "empty sleeve" isn't really the handicap that this woman's empty head is. Drop her.

DEAR ABBY: I am another one of those poor saps whose love life has gone to pot since my wife put a television set in our bedroom. Can you tell me how to get back in the act again?

DEAR NEGLECTED: They say one picture is worth ten thousand words. Don't you believe it! A few well-chosen words spoken softly and at the right moment beats any picture. Try it!

DEAR ABBY: Everyone knows that a sinner has no right to invite boy-friends over without the consent of her employer. But has the employer the right to let the baby-sitter have boys over without the consent of the baby-sitter's mother?

I found out that my 16-year-old daughter was entertaining boys at her baby-sitting job who were not allowed to come to our home. I am not trying to excuse my daughter. But don't you think the lady she sits for should have checked with me before letting my daughter entertain boys in her home? After all, my daughter is only 16 and she still needs a little supervision.

IRATE MOTHER: What good is a sinner who needs a sinner to make sure she isn't being sat with by undesirables? If you feel that your daughter needs "supervision" (and she obviously does) you shouldn't allow her to "sit" with other people's children.

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a young man who lives with his grandma. She raised him because both his parents are dead.

He has asked me to marry him. I said yes. Now he tells me that he is expecting to have his grandma live with us after we are married. I have heard that a third party is no good for a married couple. Should I call the whole thing off and look for somebody without a grandma or should I take her in? She has nowhere else to go. GERTIE.

DEAR GERTIE: If you have any second thoughts about whether to "take in" his grandma, do yourself (and the young man) a favor and call off the marriage. Bear in mind this "grandma" raised the boy. If you really loved him, there would be no thought of "looking for someone without a grandma."

Build Your Meals Around Meat

Every mother knows that a balanced breakfast is necessary to get each family member off to a good start, but getting her family in the breakfast habit is often a challenge to her ingenuity.

Why not use the flavor and aroma of meat as an incentive for routing the slug-a-beds onto the road to good nutrition? Not only does a meat breakfast add to your family's well-being, but it also contributes high quality protein, B vitamins, iron, phosphorus, potassium and magnesium, elements important to us all.

Here are some ideas for starting your day with a good morning.

QUICK BREAKFAST MEAT

Canned corned beef hash is an unusual and attractive breakfast meat. Sliced and baked, this tasty meat is one of the quickest to prepare.

For easy cutting, chill a can of corned beef hash overnight. Before breakfast, open the can at both ends and push out the meat. Cut it into four slices and broil for about eight minutes. Toast English muffins along with the meat, make the coffee, pour fruit juice and breakfast is ready.

BREAKFAST TEMPTER

For a dish with eye appeal to tempt your problem eaters, serve bologna cups filled with poached or scrambled eggs. To prepare the cups, melt a little bacon drippings in a skillet and in it heat sliced bologna until the edges cup. Serve piping hot filled with the eggs.

HEARTY BREAKFAST

Braised pork chops, fried cornmeal mush, pan-fried pineapple slices and hot baking powder biscuits make a hearty combination for supper, but have you ever tried it for breakfast? It's the kind of a meal that men eat with gusto, and women, once they've tasted it, rave about.

BRUNCH HIGHLIGHT

For a festive beginning to a special day, what could be more fun than brunch? Here is an idea for a simple menu that takes little effort on your part and gives lots of good eating pleasure.

Serve tender back bacon stacked with juicy pineapple slices. Simply alternate three slices of back bacon with two slices of pineapple, place in a baking pan and pour a sauce of thickened pineapple juice and water over the stacks. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes.

While the host is chatting with guests and all are sipping a tangy fruit juice served in sugar-frosted glasses, you can slip into the kitchen, place rolls in the oven to heat while the meat bakes and cook a skillet of scrambled eggs seasoned with a sprinkle of savory.

When serving the picturesque bacon stacks, spoon on some of the pineapple sauce.

Pastel Tones Color Scheme At Nuptials

Yellow and white were the muted tones used in floral arrangements and gowns at wedding, Friday evening, of Thelma Gail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crawford, and William John Irvine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Irvine, in Centennial United Church.

Gladioli in these tones decorated the church and bridal attendants wore dresses of white nylon tulle over yellow taffeta. Attendants were Mrs. B. Trumble, matron of honor, and Miss Dianne Duncan, bridesmaid. They carried bouquets of yellow gladioli.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, wore a gown of white French lace featuring a sabrina neckline enhancing the scalloped bodice. Sleeves were short. A white chiffon cummerbund and scalloped hemline on the skirt completed the lovely outfit. A tiara of rhinestones held her scalloped chapel-length veil. Only jewelry was a rhinestone necklace. Talisman roses and stephanotis topped the white Bible she carried.

Rev. Douglas B. Carr officiated at the service and Miss Beverly Lidstone sang "The Wedding Prayer" during signing of the register.

Russell Bowcott was best man and ushers were Barry Trumble and Vic Baratta.

A three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's grandmother, centred the bridal table at the reception in Sir William Wallace Room, Holyrood House. It was flanked by gladioli and roses. George Duncan proposed the toast.

The bride wore a navy blue suit, pink blouse and hat and navy accessories, for her going-away outfit. Her corsage was a pink gardenia.

7-PIECE JOLLY JIGSAW PUZZLE

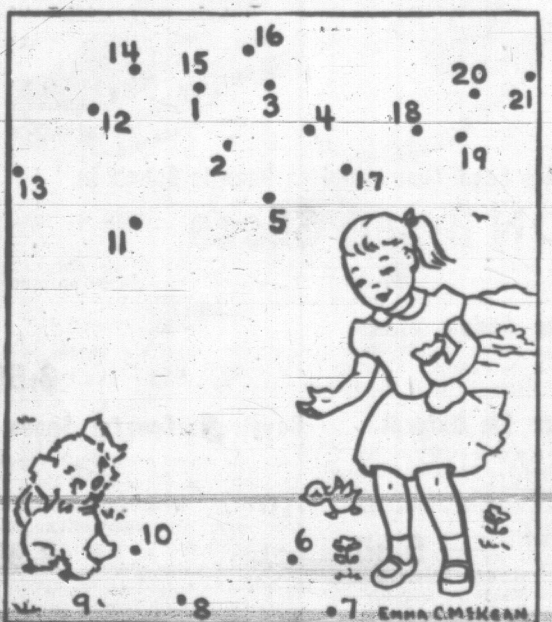

There are only seven pieces. First paste pieces to heavy paper or cardboard. Then cut them out along heavy black lines. You can have some fun fitting them back together.

Coloring Test for Junior Readers

What picture is concealed 'midst this jumble of lines? To find out, use colored pencils or crayons as follows: Wherever you see letter B, put blue, R stands for red, Bk indicates black crayon; Bk stands for brown, O is for orange, and Y for yellow, G stands for green. P stands for pink. Use red lightly, if you do not have pink, and shade it in carefully.

Puppy's Playing Hide and Seek

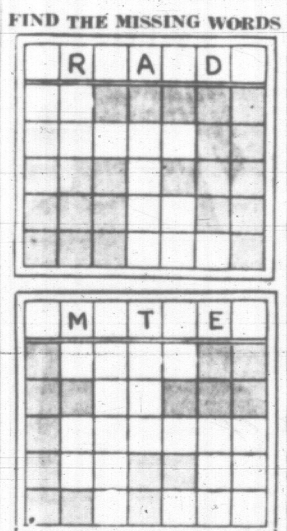

"Here Snoozey, 'Snoozey," dot 2, etc., up to dot 21. Where says Peggy, but the little dog is hiding. To find out why Peggy can't find him, draw connecting lines from dot 1 to the scene with crayons.

A GOOD CATCH

This is an amusing stunt to work among friends. It calls for a conspiracy against one you want to "trick." As you are seated or standing together for a round of sodas, suggest a game to see who pays—all of you will place right hands palms up on the table-top or counter; then at the count of three, the last man to slap his hand down is "stuck" with the check.

FIND THE MISSING WORDS

Examine the letter structure of almost any word of four letters or more in the English language and you will discover shorter words contained therein. Two such words are given here.

To restore the missing letters proceed as follows: Copy all of the letters now showing in the empty spaces directly below them. Then, wherever possible, form new short words by trial and error until you have found letters that function in all horizontal rows. Answers are stated below, if you need them.

The world's first large public library was founded in Boston in 1852.

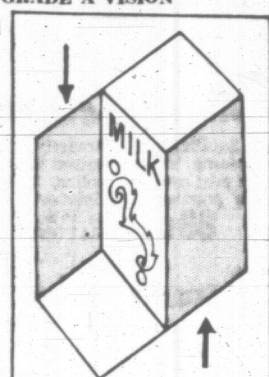

By MILLARD HOPPER

White makes a great sacrifice here, then goes on to take the game in five moves.

It's White's turn, moving up the board. See if you can emulate his winning strategy.

Answers: One and one-half pounds and one-half ounce.

GRADE A VISION

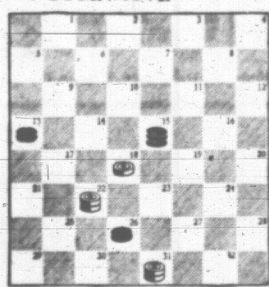

Is this milk container standing on end, or is it resting on its side? Gaze at this figure fixedly for several seconds, and you'll see it appear to change perspective before your very eyes. It's a clever optical illusion, of course. Did you ever try drawing one?

BAKING CAKES

Mrs. Starch is making cakes for her daughter's birthday party. She has enough batter to make eight pounds of cake, and has cake tins of two sizes. She is trying to decide whether to bake one large one and six dozen small ones, or four large ones of the same size and 32 small ones. You can't help her make up her mind but you can figure out how much her large and small cakes should weigh? How much?

IT'S YOUR MOVE

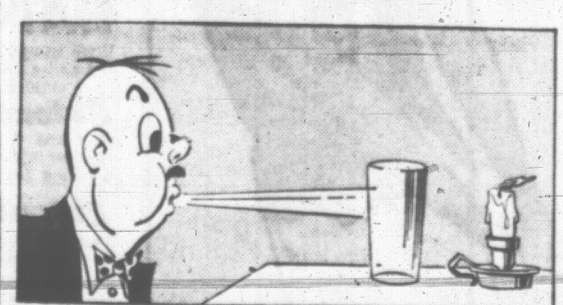

By MILLARD HOPPER

White makes a great sacrifice here, then goes on to take the game in five moves.

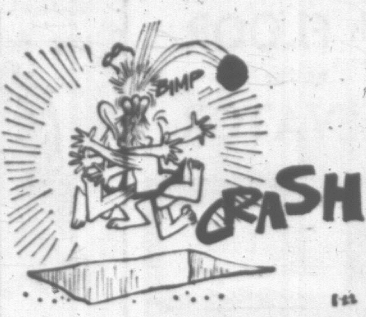

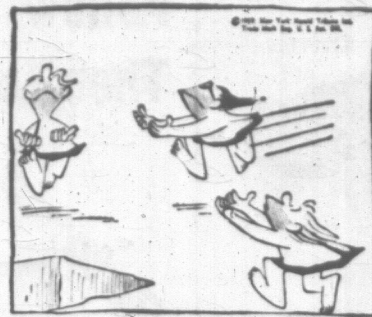

It's White's turn, moving up the board. See if you can emulate his winning strategy.

BREATH-TAKING BIT OF MAGIC

For an impressive bit of magic, light a candle, place it on the table and place a glass or bottle between it and you. Move the glass backward and forward a few times with the pretense of putting it in exactly the right spot; examine it, pretend to dry it with a napkin, tap it on the table, etc. Now for the trick: Take a deep breath, blow against the glass and the candle is at once extinguished. Oddly, when the breath is blown against the centre of the glass, the air on the opposite side, striking the flame with all of their original strength. To all appearances, however, you have succeeded in blowing through the obstacle before you.

KISS FOR BRIDE

Steven Rockefeller, kisses his bride, the former Annie Marie Rasmussen, after their wedding today in Sogne, Norway.

ROCKEFELLER WEDS FORMER MAID

'Love Breaks All Barriers' —Cinderella Becomes Bride

SGONE, Norway (AP)—Ane Marie Rasmussen married Steven Rockefeller today and became a member of the millionaire family for whom she once worked as a parlor maid.

The service lasted 45 minutes. During most of that time Steven hardly took his eyes off his bride.

When she entered on the arm of her father, Steven rose and watched while she walked slowly down the centre aisle.

Anne Marie, beautiful in a white wedding gown with a pearl-studded veil, kept her eyes downcast. But when she was about 10 feet from the altar rail, she raised her head, glanced at Steven and smiled. She looked pale.

in a country church on a gentle knoll, within sight of the bride's family home.

Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, and Steven's brothers, sisters, and a sister-in-law witnessed the Lutheran ceremony.

Mrs. Rockefeller and Anne Marie's father, Kristian Rasmussen, retired grocer and fish merchant, sat together near the altar.

FLOWERS IN AISLE

The bride's mother, Lovise, watched the rites from the opposite side of the centre aisle, which was decorated with pink carnations and roses.

Rev. Olav Gaustestad, vicar of Sogne Parish Church, asked the young couple, in turn, whether they would take each other as man and wife. Then he said: "Now give each other your hand on that."

Steven took Anne Marie's hand in his and the vicar placed his hands over theirs and solemnly pronounced the traditional phrase:

"You have promised each other that you will live in matrimony, and have confessed it before God and man and given your hand on it, and I now proclaim that you are man and wife. In the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Pastor Gaustestad told the couple:

"Your example shows that real love, which is from God, breaks down all the social and conventional barriers amongst us. To build a good home is perhaps the greatest of all arts."

Steven and Anne Marie fly to New York Sunday for a honeymoon in the United States.

Crowds lined the road in front of the church three hours before the ceremony.

Church Group Pleads for A-Test Ban

RHODES, Greece (Reuters)—The "foreign ministry" of the World Council of Churches today appealed to the United States, Britain and Russia not to resume nuclear tests so as to give the Geneva test ban conference more time to reach agreement.

The "ministry" — the committee of churches on international affairs — called urgently for a treaty to end all tests. It called on all other powers contemplating tests to suspend them.

The "ministry" also called for urgent negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the Algerian war.

The council embraces 173 Protestant and Greek Orthodox churches.

$39,000 HOLDUP NO PRANK

STEUENVILLE, Ohio (CP)—Two men held up the community savings bank at Yorkville today, getting away with nearly $39,000. It was the first day that special police, thinking they were victims of a prank, had dropped their guard.

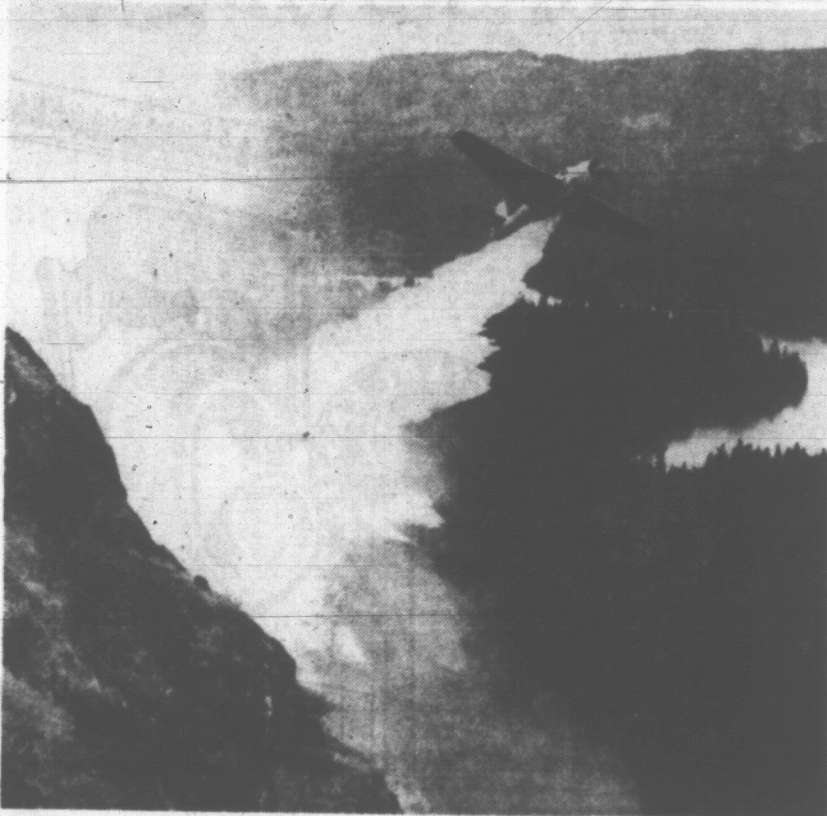

A week ago Tuesday a woman's voice on the telephone predicted there would be a holdup at 10.30 a.m. There wasn't any that day, but the special officers watched the bank day after day.

Concluding it was a practical joke, the bank dropped its special precautions today.

Johnston Five Up

VANCOUVER (CP)—Jovial John Johnston of Vancouver held a commanding and surprising five-hole lead over young Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., at the halfway mark in the 36-hole Canadian amateur golf championship match here today.

Johnston, a 33-year-old real estate salesman, continued his sensational sub-par shooting to finish the 18 holes three under par, firing an approximate medal score of 68. Cowan was two over par for the morning round.

FOREST FIRE 'BOMBED'

Grumman Avenger water bomber from mainland was called on by B.C. Forest Service Friday to control fire atop Mt. Baldy, overlooking Shawnigan Lake. Here 600 gallons drop on fire, reported today as "quiet" with small crew on guard. Blaze, started by youths, covered 15-20 acres.

FIREFIGHTERS with hand tools built fire guard over rough country which made use of bulldozers impossible. Fire started Wednesday, covered viewpoint favored by hikers in Shawnigan area.

IMMIGRATION BUREAUCRACY BLASTED

Is Canada Cold-Hearted?

VIENNA (AP)—Austria's anti-Communist press today rapped the West—and particularly the United States and Canada—for resorting to "methods of cold-blooded bureaucracy instead of humanity" in denying political asylum to four stowaway-refugees from Communist Yugoslavia.

The refugees spent five months aboard a Danish ship and three times crossed the Atlantic in search for a Western country that would accept them. Their odyssey ended at New York's Austrian consulate Friday night when they were given Austrian immigration papers and boarded a plane for Vienna.

Austria's biggest daily, Neuer Kurier, inquires in a sarcastic front-page editorial by editor Hugo Portisch:

"How would the United States and Canada act in Austria's place with borders of three Communist neighbor countries which for many years were crossed by hundreds of thousands of refugees escaping tyranny because they believed in the ideals of freedom?"

"Would the United States and Canada also ask these refugees for a passport, a visa, a paid return ticket, an x-ray photograph? And, if the refugees didn't have these things, would they be taken to the border and sent back?"

"We understand many things. We realize that a country has its laws, that authorities comply with the laws. But we fail to grasp the reason why nations with so much space for millions of people could not apply humanity instead of law in the case of four people... who—to the letter of the law—have ceased to be human beings because they have no papers, no visa, no money..."

"Suppose they'd had their honeymoon in Norway and watch the fjords go by."

WIRE BRIEFS

K. to Visit 7 Cities

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev will visit six United States cities outside Washington, it was announced today. They are New York City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Des Moines and Ames, Iowa, and Pittsburgh.

2 Brothers Killed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—Two men were killed, early today, in a traffic accident at Red Rock, about 20 miles south of here. RCMP identified them only as two Prince George brothers.

Athens Cheers Grivas

ATHENS (Reuters)—Shouts of "Digenis, save Greece" greeted Gen. George Grivas, former Cyprus underground leader, when he arrived here today from the island of Corfu.

India Minister Quits

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Food Minister Ajit Prasad Jain resigned from the cabinet today after scathing criticism of India's food difficulties.

Could Not Ignore Probable "Hoax"

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—A telephoned threat to the life of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, received at the switchboard of CJLH-TV station shortly before the prime minister was to go "on camera" Friday afternoon, immediately invoked extra security action on the part of RCMP and city police but no incident materialized.

The first call received at the TV station from an anonymous caller said that if the prime minister appeared on TV "something pretty serious will happen to him."

Norman Botterill, manager of CJLH-TV, immediately called RCMP and city police. The prime minister's cavalcade of cars to the station was led by a city police escort and plainclothes officers followed in another car.

Plain clothes RCMP officers also were on hand at the TV station while the prime minister was being interviewed. During the time the interview program was on the air, another phone call was received at the station's switchboard, with the same voice saying words to the effect of:

"Get him off right now, or what we said would happen will happen."

Police officers also checked the prime minister's route both ways, as well as buildings and rooftops en route. Extra security officers were placed on duty at downtown points and at a hotel.

Precautions were maintained right up until the time the Diefenbaker aircraft took off for Vancouver.

"OBVIOUSLY A CRANK"

"These calls were obviously the work of a crank," commented Staff Sergeant W. A. Allen of the Lethbridge RCMP detachment.

"But we cannot afford to ignore them and all possible security measures were taken," Detective Inspector M. Coupland of the Lethbridge city police said "I don't think there was anything to it."

In Vancouver today, a member of Mr. Diefenbaker's staff said "as far as any of us are concerned, including Mr. Diefenbaker, we don't know the first thing about so-called threats."

BRIGGS 'BEST MAN' FOR JOB

VANCOUVER (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said here today H. Lee Briggs was named to the federal energy commission because he was "the best man."

The prime minister refused however to be drawn by reporters into the controversy surrounding the dismissed general manager of the B.C. Power Commission and the Shrum report.

300,000 Out to See PNE Parade

VANCOUVER (CP)—An estimated 300,000 people turned out under cloudy skies today to watch the biggest and best Pacific National Exhibition parade in history.

Some 2,000 performers, 60 floats and 35 bands paraded through downtown Vancouver before crowds that packed the streets.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who was to officially open the exhibition this afternoon, was near the head of the parade in an open white convertible which travelled behind a uniformed detachment of RCMP.

He was followed by gaily-decorated floats.

Surrey Man Killed

LONDON (Reuters)—Wolverhampton Wanderers, trying for a third title in England's top soccer league, got off to a winning start today as warm weather brought thousands of fans out for the start of the 1959-60 season in this country's most popular sport. The Wolves defeated Birmingham City 1-0.

Big gates were reported by most clubs as the season, which runs until late next spring, opened across the country.

Wolverhampton is the team to beat in the First Division as it tries for its third straight title—a feat only two other clubs have accomplished in the history of English professional soccer.

More than 41,000 fans saw the Wolves score their lone goal in the first half. Inside right Bob Mason notched the tally.

CONTENDERS LOSE

The two teams expected to give Wolverhampton its biggest tussle, Arsenal and Manchester United, both lost.

Arsenal was beaten 1-0 by Sheffield Wednesday, a team that was promoted this year to the First Division from the Second Division. Arsenal played so badly that the 48,000 home fans resorted to derisive handclapping in the last half.

Inside-forward Dave Burnside of West Bromwich Albion scored two goals and set up the third as his team beat Manchester United 3-2.

Reds Seize Outposts In New Laos Fighting

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—

Royal Lao troops and Communist forces are locked in a bitter battle about 35 miles from the town of Samneua in northern Laos, according to reports reaching here today.

The reports said several government outposts had fallen into Communist hands during the past 48 hours.

There was no official confirmation by the Laotian government.

Nurses at a Filipino-operated brotherhood hospital at Banban were said to have been moved out because of the increased Communist military activity.

Archaeology Lacking In Province

(Wilson Duff, curator of anthropology of the provincial museum, today concludes his series of articles on excavation of the midden at McNeill Bay with a special message about Canada's approach to archaeology. The digging itself will go on for another week and later, when the finds have been assessed, he plans a concluding report).

By WILSON DUFF

Our McNeill Bay excavation is proving productive enough, in its own small way, but we can't honestly claim that its significance is very great. It will fill in a piece of the gigantic jigsaw puzzle of Canada's pre-history, but only a little piece.

However, it's the best we can do right now. We are really only part-time professionals in archaeology, and can take only a couple of weeks each summer to make taken forays into this field.

There isn't really a full-time, practicing archaeologist in B.C. Dr. Charles Borden of U.B.C. does in fact accomplish more than most full-time professionals, but he also has to maintain his position as Professor of German.

And there you have it. That is the sum of B.C.'s current "professional" efforts to preserve the records of our prehistoric past. In the other provinces the scale of operations is roughly the same, except that in a few no archaeology is being done whatever.

While we have been scraping away slowly with our trowels, hundreds of other middens more important than ours have been feeling the bite of bulldozer blades and power shovels, as well as the constant erosion of the ever-rising tides.

Winter Training

Every summer he manages at least one significant survey or excavation—this summer it is the extremely important Early Man site in the Fraser Canyon—and every winter he conducts a "training dig" in conjunction with his course in archaeology.

And there you have it. That is the sum of B.C.'s current "professional" efforts to preserve the records of our prehistoric past. In the other provinces the scale of operations is roughly the same, except that in a few no archaeology is being done whatever.

Bulldozed Over

In Caddboro Bay a new house foundation ripped a hole through thousands of years of the archaeological record. In Victoria harbor an old midden was bulldozed to cover over a newer one, the city garbage dump.

Up Island a couple of years ago, and maybe still, a private company mined shell from a huge midden and processed it as chicken feed.

In the interior, a road grader ripped an Indian skeleton from its grave. Engineering studies went ahead on industrial projects that will flood hundreds of miles of river margins and obliterate countless archaeological sites.

We do not have, in B.C. or in Canada as a whole, any systematic provision for preserving an adequate sample of the archaeological remains threatened with destruction. We are allowing our archaeological resources to dwindle away with scarcely more than a twinge of conscience.

Others Do Better

The same is not true of other nations such as the United States. I'll spare you the painful comparisons, but measured against what other countries are doing, as against the dimensions of the problem itself, our record and immediate promise of accomplishment are sadly deficient.

I suggested earlier to private collectors that they should be willing to accept the obligation to take proper care of their specimens, since after all they are only custodians of something which belongs rightfully to all of the people.

In the same sense, we Canadians are custodians of a piece of human history which belongs not just to us, and we have a similar obligation to preserve it.

Somewhere once said that a country without a history is like a man without a memory. Perhaps too, a country that allows its history to be lost is like a man without a conscience. Where does Canada's conscience reside? How can it be reached?

Stunting in Jet 'Not Dangerous'

Flying a Sabre jet with the RCAF Golden Hawks stunt team isn't dangerous.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

There is almost a car for every household now in B.C., according to government statistics. And if trucks are counted there are motor vehicles to spare.

Vehicle registrations to the end of July totalled 501,611, while statistics show 446,000 households in B.C.

The July vehicle figure compares with 473,474 at the same date last year. The new total includes 389,307 passenger vehicles.

He was remanded to Monday for sentence on both charges.

Cathedral to Present Nativity Opera

By PETER MATTHEWS

Christmas is still four months away but at Christ Church Cathedral plans are going forward for a Yule-celebrating event that will be, possibly, one of the most rare and beautiful ever to take place within a Canadian cathedral.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," a mystical music-drama concerning the time of the Nativity of Jesus Christ, is to be performed in the cathedral between Christmas and New Year, with permission of the archbishop and dean and chapter of the cathedral.

The work, composed by contemporary Italian opera composer Gian Carlo Menotti, is on a high inspirational level both as to the music and the simple, moving story which unfolds an imagined incident between a poor widow, her crippled child and the three Kings of the Orient on their way to Bethlehem.

Richard Proudman, cathedral organist and choirmaster, will train the choir and soloists, and Times music-drama critic Audrey Johnson will direct the presentation.

"Peggy Walton Packard will sing the role of the mother and young Timothy Vernon, the child Amahl. The Kings will be sung by Stanley Hoban, Norman Tyrrell and Harry Johns, and the cathedral choir will supply the chorus.

Menotti's 45-minute music-drama was the composer's response to the idea of the Nativity, written as was Handel's "Messiah," in a mood of spiritual exaltation and based on the Italian legend that the three kings—not St. Nicholas—are the children's visitors on Christmas Eve.

It is envisioned by its sponsors and producers here as a rich and memorable experience for all ages, but particularly for the young people of the city.

While this is the first time that a musical work of this nature has been performed locally in a church—and undoubtedly it is the first time anywhere that "Amahl" has been so presented—the combination of drama and the church is as old as religion itself.

In recent years many of the old morality and mystery plays have been revived to be performed in churches at Christmas and Easter.

T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," a verse play was done not so long ago in a Toronto cathedral and here in Victoria there is a delightful precedent in the several performances of the Nativity at St. Barnabas.

Police Probing $600 Burglary In Fairfield

Kitchen Window Yielded Entry

Theft of jewels and household goods totalling about $600 from an unoccupied Fairfield home Thursday is being investigated by city detectives today.

Burglary of the home of Angus Garfield, 1705 Richardson, was discovered at 12.20 a.m. Thursday, but a list of stolen property was not available to police until today with the return of the occupants from out of town.

Entry was by means of breaking a kitchen window, police said.

Missing are a radio, electric mixer, assorted women's clothing, musical silver powder box and inlaid jewel case which contained the following:

Silver cuff links, costume jewelry, a gold set ring, gold locket, earrings and pendant, and two gold crosses, one set with a pearl.

The clothing was contained in a plastic case, also missing from the house.

No 'Butt-End' Of Bus Line Says Parrott

President of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Conway Parrott, today took strong issue with a reported statement by Victoria MP A. DeB. McPhillips that Victoria was "the butt-end of a bus service to the mainland."

"This remark is quite unfair," said Mr. Parrott, who is general manager of Vancouver Island Coach Lines. "Mr. McPhillips obviously must think the company is still owned by Canadian Pacific Railway."

Mr. Parrott's comment came after the minister said he was "surprised" that CPR apparently planned to abandon its winter ferry schedules between Victoria and Vancouver but keep them going for the "lucrative summer tourist business."

Mr. McPhillips said Victoria would be "at the mercy of a bus line and the Nanaimo ferries to Vancouver" in the winter months.

"I am not one of those who apparently believe our needs can be safeguarded by a bus and ferry combination," Mr. McPhillips said.

"For Mr. McPhillips to call Victoria the butt-end of a bus service is something I cannot get over," Mr. Parrott said. "We have a fast de luxe service to Vancouver that carried 48,000 people last year and will serve about 60,000 this year."

Wide Scenic Vistas Opened With New West Coast Road

ACCESSIBLE FOR FIRST TIME to holidaying motorists will be Long Beach, 12-mile stretch of sand between Tofino and Ucluelet, on west coast of Vancouver Island. New road opening Sept. 4 will make vast vacation area out of hitherto isolated beauty spots.

Public Use Restricted Temporarily

Some of Vancouver Island's most spectacular scenery will come within reach of private motorists on the Labor Day weekend with the opening to the public—with certain restrictions—of the Alberni-Tofino road.

Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi has announced the road will be open for public use Sept. 4 at 5 p.m. It will then be open to the public from 5 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily, and continuously on weekends and holidays.

Tofino and Ucluelet residents likely will cheer the opening of the road more than others on the Island. For years they have agitated for a land connection with the rest of the Island, and they actually put it to use today with a 50-car caravan run to Nanaimo.

NOT YET OFFICIAL

This was a special concession to the area, since the road is still officially closed, and will remain so for the next two weeks.

The road has a gravel surface of from 18 to 20 feet in width.

Restrictions are imposed to permit free use by logging trucks in regular working hours.

The 62-mile route follows nine miles of public road to Sproat Lake then uses 25 miles of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. forest access road. B.C. government built a nine-mile link to connect with six miles of B.C. Forest Products Ltd. road and the public highways joining Tofino and Ucluelet.

LONG BEACH GOAL

Kennedy River and the spectacular sections along the sheer rocky shores of Kennedy Lake will be among the highlights of the route.

But the "pot of gold" at the end of the drive will be Long Beach, the 12-mile stretch of sand facing the open Pacific, and for years the most tantalizing tourist objective on Vancouver Island.

Recreation and conservation department has established several undeveloped park reserves along the route for the benefit of campers.

Employees Meet

Annual meeting of the British Columbia Government employees' Association will include talks on increased wages and the recent strike of provincial servants.

Some 80 delegates will meet here Oct. 2 and 3.

ASK THE TIMES

Q—I am interested in knowing what happened to the lobsters that were brought to this coast a few years ago. R. J. A—The lobsters were shipped in ice from the Maritimes and placed in a protective pool at the Departure Bay experimental station in an attempt to see if lobsters would thrive on this coast. This was about 1946. Fisheries authorities say there is no reason why lobsters can't live in these waters, but, regardless of this claim, the lobsters gradually disappeared. The suspicion is they were taken out, and eaten, by a person or persons unknown.

Q—When did "My Fur Lady" appear here at the Royal? J.M. A—First performance was July 29, 1958, and it ran three days.

Physical Fitness for Children Big Point With Health Minister

Federal Health Minister J. Waldo Monteith said here today he would like to see a national physical fitness council established to help ensure the health of Canadian children.

"It would be a basically good idea," he said, adding that there was need for "resurgence" in sports interest.

Children today "don't walk when they can ride," he said, and this extended into other fields of their activity.

"I know with my own children I would like to see them taking more part in sports."

GOES TO NORTHLAND

Mr. Monteith, after a few days in Jasper, Alta., leaving here will spend a week visiting federal hospitals in the Yukon at Aklavik, N.W.T.

"We seem to be making real headway in combating tuberculosis amongst the Indians," he said.

At one stage of the Indian treatment program, almost 100 per cent of cases were TB.

"Today it is down to 75 per cent. We are pleased."

On the question of socialization of medical services, the minister said "I wouldn't have an answer," then added, "I am in favor of maintaining the present doctor-patient relationship."

MUST BE PAID FOR

Mr. Monteith said he would like to impress the public that the more health services wanted, the more the cost, and it comes out of your tax dollar.

Budget of the health department last year was $1 billion, 400 million, second only to national defence.

The federal government stands ready to share chronic hospitalizing building and care on a 50-50 basis anytime B.C. wants it, Mr. Monteith said.

"We don't tell the provinces what to do."

Mr. Monteith this morning visited Dr. S. F. Blundell, in charge of the quarantine offices here, and left with his family at noon.

LONDON (Reuters)—Wolverhampton Wanderers, trying for a third title in England's top soccer league, got off to a winning start today as warm weather brought thousands of fans out for the start of the 1959-60 season in this country's most popular sport. The Wolves defeated Birmingham City 1-0.

Big gates were reported by most clubs as the season, which runs until late next spring, opened across the country.

Wolverhampton is the team to beat in the First Division as it tries for its third straight title—a feat only two other clubs have accomplished in the history of English professional soccer.

More than 41,000 fans saw the Wolves score their lone goal in the first half. Inside right Bob Mason notched the tally.

CONTENDERS LOSE

The two teams expected to give Wolverhampton its biggest tussle, Arsenal and Manchester United, both lost.

Arsenal was beaten 1-0 by Sheffield Wednesday, a team that was promoted this year to the First Division from the Second Division. Arsenal played so badly that the 48,000 home fans resorted to derisive handclapping in the last half.

Inside-forward Dave Burn side of West Bromwich Albion scored two goals and set up the third as his team beat Manchester United 3-2.

Reds Seize Outposts In New Laos Fighting

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—Royal Laotian troops and Communist forces are locked in a bitter battle about 35 miles from the town of Samneua in northern Laos, according to reports reaching here today.

The reports said several government outposts had fallen into Communist hands during the past 48 hours.

There was no official confirmation by the Laotian government.

Nurses at a Filipino-operated brotherhood hospital at Banban were said to have been moved out because of the increased Communist military activity.

'IF YOU WANT HANGINGS HAVE THEM IN PUBLIC'

BATH, Ont. (UPI)—The reeve of Bath today began building a gibbet to bring attention to what he calls "the barbaric practice of capital punishment."

Reeve Ron Green said he was erecting the gallows to draw attention to his campaign to have hanging abolished.

Bath is the site of the first execution by hanging in Canada. A man was hanged in 1790 for stealing a watch. He was later found innocent.

Green said he has written to Justice Minister Davie Fulton suggesting that if capital punishment must stay, hangings should be done in public. He says this would be a "logical answer to the people who insist that the death penalty is a deterrent to murder."

KHRUSHCHEV'S TOUR DETAILS ANNOUNCED

Trip to Include West Coast Visit

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev will visit six United States cities outside Washington, it was announced today. They are New York City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Des Moines and Ames, Iowa, and Pittsburgh.

Details of his stay in the U.S. from Sept. 15 through Sept. 27 were announced by White House press secretary James C. Hagerty. It was announced in Ottawa Friday that he will not visit Canada.

Hagerty said Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and a member of the president's cabinet, will accompany Khrushchev during his travels.

SCHEDULE

The Soviet leader's schedule was announced as follows:

Sept. 15-16, Washington; Sept. 17-18, New York City; Sept. 19, Los Angeles; Sept. 20-21, San Francisco; Sept. 22-23, Des Moines and Ames; Sept. 24, Pittsburgh.

He will return that evening to Washington, where he will spend Sept. 25, 26, 27.

Khrushchev is slated to speak to the National Press Club in Washington, Sept. 16, and answer reporters' questions in a nationally televised appearance.

He will address the UN General Assembly in New York two days later.

$39,000 HOLDUP NO PRANK

STUEBENVILLE, Ohio (CP)—Two men held up the community savings bank at Yorkville today, getting away with nearly $39,000. It was the first day that special police, thinking they were victims of a prank, had dropped their guard.

A week ago Tuesday a woman's voice on the telephone predicted there would be a holdup at 10:30 a.m. There wasn't any that day, but the special officers watched the bank day after day.

Concluding it was a practical joke, the bank dropped its special precautions today.

Church Group Pleads for A-Test Ban

RHODES, Greece (Reuters)—The "foreign ministry" of the World Council of Churches today appealed to the United States, Britain and Russia not to resume nuclear tests so as to give the Geneva test-ban conference more time to reach agreement.

The "ministry"—the committee of churches on international affairs called urgently for a treaty to end all tests. It called on all other powers contemplating tests to suspend them.

The "ministry" also called for urgent negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the Algerian war.

The council embraces 173 Protestant and Greek Orthodox churches.

CINDERELLA ROMANCE

Ex-Maid Weds Rockefeller

SOGNE, Norway (AP)—Ann Marie Rasmussen married Steven Rockefeller today and became a member of the millionaire family for whom she once worked as a parlor maid.

The service lasted 45 minutes. During most of that time Steven hardly took his eyes off his bride.

When she entered on the arm of her father, Steven rose and watched while she walked slowly down the center aisle.

Anne Marie, beautiful in a white wedding gown with a pearl-studded veil, kept her eyes downcast. But when she was about 10 feet from the altar rail, she raised her head, glanced at Steven and smiled. She looked pale.

They pronounced their vows in a country church on a gentle knoll, within sight of the bride's family home.

Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, and Steven's brothers, sisters, and a sister-in-law witnessed the Lutheran ceremony.

Mrs. Rockefeller and Anne Marie's father, Kristian Rasmussen, retired grocer and fish merchant, sat together near the altar.

The bride's mother, Lovise, watched the rites from the opposite side of the center aisle, which was decorated with pink carnations and roses.

Rev. Olav Gaustestad, vicar of Sogne Parish Church, asked the young couple, in turn, whether they would take each other as man and wife. Then he said: "Now give each other your hand on that."

Steven took Anne Marie's hand in his and the vicar placed his hands over theirs and solemnly pronounced the traditional phrase:

"You have promised each other that you will live in matrimony, and have confessed it before God and man and given your hand on it, and I now proclaim that you are man and wife. In the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Pastor Gaustestad told the couple:

"Your example shows that real love, which is from God, breaks down all the social and conventional barriers amongst us. To build a good home is perhaps the greatest of all arts."

PROBABLE 'HOAX'

RCMP Increase Guards After PM Threatened

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—A telephoned threat to the life of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, received at the switchboard of CJLH-TV station shortly before the prime minister was to go "on camera" Friday afternoon, immediately invoked extra security action on the part of RCMP and city police but no incident materialized.

The first call received at the TV station from an anonymous caller said that if the prime minister appeared on TV "something pretty serious will happen to him."

Norman Botterill, manager of CJLH-TV, immediately called RCMP and city police. The prime minister's cavalcade of cars to the station was led by a city police escort and plainclothes officers followed in another car.

Plain clothes RCMP officers also were on hand at the TV station while the prime minister was being interviewed. During the time the interview program was on the air, another phone call was received at the station's switchboard, with the same voice saying words to the effect of:

"Get him off right now, or what we said would happen will happen."

Police officers also checked the prime minister's route both ways, as well as buildings and rooftops en route. Extra security officers were placed on duty at downtown points and at a hotel.

Precautions were maintained right up until the time the Diefenbaker aircraft took off for Vancouver.

"OBVIOUSLY A CRANK"

"These calls were obviously the work of a crank," commented Staff Sergeant W. A. Allen of the Lethbridge RCMP detachment.

"But we cannot afford to ignore them and all possible security measures were taken."

Detective Inspector M. Coupland of the Lethbridge city police said "I don't think there was anything to it."

In Vancouver today, a member of Mr. Diefenbaker's staff said "as far as any of us are concerned, including Mr. Diefenbaker, we don't know the first thing about so-called threats."

IMMIGRATION BUREAUCRACY BLASTED

Is Canada Cold-Hearted?

VIENNA (AP)—Austria's anti-Communist press today rapped the West—and particularly the United States and Canada—for resorting to "methods of cold-blooded bureaucracy instead of humanity" in denying political asylum to four stowaway-refugees from Communist Yugoslavia.

The refugees spent five months aboard a Danish ship and three times crossed the Atlantic in search for a Western country that would accept them. Their odyssey ended at New York's Austrian consulate Friday night when they were given Austrian immigration papers and boarded a plane for Vienna.

Austria's biggest daily, Neuer Kurier, inquires in a sarcastic front-page editorial by editor Hugo Portisch:

"How would the United States and Canada act in Austria's place—with borders of three Communist neighbor countries, which, for many years were crossed by hundreds of thousands of refugees escaping tyranny because they believed in the ideals of freedom?"

"Would the United States and Canada also ask these refugees for a passport, a visa, a paid return ticket, an x-ray photograph? And, if the refugees didn't have these things, would they be taken to the border and sent back?"

"We understand many things. We realize that a country has its laws, that authorities comply with the laws. But we fail to grasp the reason why nations with so much space for millions of people could not apply humanity instead of law in the case of four people... who—to the letter of the law—have ceased to be human beings because they have no papers, no visa, no money..."

U.K. Union Switches Bomb Stand

LONDON (Reuters) — One of Britain's biggest labor unions Friday revised its "ban-the-hydrogen-bomb" policy and decided to support the Labor party line.

At a special conference, the 775,000-member General and Municipal Workers Union voted for the official Labor policy by 194 to 139.

In June, the union's annual conference seriously split the labor movement with its ban-the-bomb resolution, approved by 130 to 126.

In an effort to close the rift, the Labor party and the Trades Union Congress suggested Britain should keep the bomb pending a world "non-nuclear club" for every nation except the U.S. and Russia.

'THE GREAT ELOPEMENT' ... AND SIR THOMAS DID

SIR THOMAS BEECHAM ... to be tamed?

LONDON (AP) — Sir Thomas Beecham, the petulant patriarch of the podium, wound up a satisfactory recording of Handel's The Great Elopement. Then the 80-year-old British maestro and his 27-year-old secretary, Shirley Hudson, left the study together—and eloped.

Their elopement was kept secret until this morning when Sir Thomas himself—presumably honeymooning in Switzerland—advised it in a London newspaper.

A six-line notice in The Daily Telegraph's personal classified section said:

"Sir Thomas Beecham and Miss S. Hudson.

Loan Freeze Blamed on Banks

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker Friday night criticized the attitude of Canada's chartered banks towards increases in Bank of Canada interest rates.

Mr. Diefenbaker, addressing about 500 persons attending the 70th anniversary banquet of the Lethbridge Chamber of Commerce, said an "erroneous impression has been created suggesting that restrictions on lending were attributed to increases in the Bank of Canada interest rates."

The claim, made by chartered banks, was "scarcely in accordance with the facts," the prime minister said.

Chartered banks could borrow only on occasion from the Bank of Canada, and then only for a few months.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the reason for restrictions was solely "the tremendous upsurge in the Canadian economy with the result that commercial loans have reached an all-time record."

"There has been no freezing of the money supply by the government; no policy to restrain lending."

He said the only restrictions now being imposed are those made by the lending organizations themselves.

The prime minister said he looked to banks to administer lending policies so small borrowers and businessmen would not be placed in an "impossible position."
